Hope raised for break in Iran

TEHRAN (CP) — The Iranian government may announce new steps in the American hostage crisis as early as tonight, perhaps including transfer of the 50 captives to government custody, a foreign ministry spokesman said.

But revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini made a new broadcast attack on the United States, accusing it of threatening force.

Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr met Monday with representatives of the student militants, but there were no official announcements after his talks with the three militants, the official news agency Pars said. The meeting took place in a government building where the president had met earlier with members of the ruling Revolutionary Council, which he heads.

U.S. President Carter postponed a scheduled Washington speech to a labor group and set a conference with national security advisers, shortly after reports from Iran said transfer of the hostages was being considered.

It also was learned in Washington that a message Carter sent to Iranian officials warned that the United States would order further retaliation against Iran if there is no break in the hostage situation.

In Cairo, an Egyptian doctor said the deposed Iranian shah's cancer has spread to his liver. Doctors removed the ex-monarch's dangerously enlarged spleen last Friday in an operation in a Cairo hospital. It was the deposed monarch's admission to the United States for treatment of his cancer, despite the opposition of the new Iranian regime, that sparked the Nov. 4 takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran by Iranian student militants and the seizure of American hostages.

In a Tehran radio broadcast today, Khomeini attacked the United States for what he called threats of military force to free the American hostages.

"It was all words," he said of the U.S. stance. "Even now it is all just words. Never be afraid of such words because they are not followed by action."

The Iranian foreign ministry spokesman told The Canadian Press the subject of a hostage transfer was taken up by the ruling Revolutionary Council and that President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr would discuss the matter tonight with Khomeini, who would have the final word.

After a Sunday council meeting, Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said the council members had discussed a proposal made by Irish diplomat Sean

On to Moscow for Canadians?

MONTREAL (CP) — The board of directors of the Canadian Olympic Association passed a four-part resolution Sunday affirming its intention to accept an invitation to participate in the Summer Games at Moscow, president Dick Pound said.

The resolution said the COA "rejects in principle the proposition that the burden of Canada's response to the present international situation be borne primarily by Canadian Olympic athletes and that, in the absence of a much broader Canadian government response to the international situation, the COA confirms its resolve to accept the invitation to participate in the 1980 Olympic Games, within the time limit provided in the Olympic Charter."

Pound said the directors were unanimous in the decision to send a team to Moscow. United States President Jimmy Carter has proposed a boycott to protest the Soviet Union's invasion of Afghanistan, but the Liberal government of Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau has not announced what stand Canada will take.

"We have received an invitation," Pound said of an invitation from the Moscow organizing committee, "but, out of courtesy to the government, we won't respond until meeting them."

The COA must tell the Moscow organizing committee whether it will take part and how many will be in the Canadian delegation eight weeks before the Games open July 19. That makes the deadline May 24.

40 die at Romero rites as shots trigger panic

SAN SALVADOR (Reuter) — At least 40 people were killed, many of them trampled to death, when gunfire and bombs sent thousands of mourners fleeing for their lives at the funeral Sunday of murdered Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero.

The thousands of sandals and shoes strewn around the Barrios Plaza in front of San Salvador's Cathedral told the story of the tragedy They had been abandoned by mourners who fled in panic.

At the sound of guns, the crowd turned into a shrieking mob. Official Red Cross and hospital spokesmen said at least 40 people died and 450 were injured — most of them trampled under the tidal wave of terrified human beings.

The body of Romero, who was shot to death while saying mass last Monday, was about to be laid to rest in a crypt in San Salvador's Roman Catholic Cathedral when the violence erupted.

An estimated 300,000 people fought their way to safety along with church leaders representing the Vatican, the United States, Europe and Latin America.

Sporadic gunfire rang out through the night in the nearly deserted capital, where troops in jeeps

Dustin Hoffman went from rags to riches with his performance as Benjamin in The Graduate.

Then he went back to rags by accepting the role of Ratso Rizzo, a Times Square scavenger, in Midnight Cowboy.

Hoffman explained he was concerned about becoming typecast as an amiable bumbler and played Ratso to demonstrate his versatility.

He was nominated for Academy Awards for both performances.

His career has been a stunning series of successes since then.

A perennial nominee, he is up for best actor again this year for his powerful role in Kramer vs. Kramer, which is also highly-regarded in the best-movie category.

Weighing just 135 pounds, and only slightly over five-feet, six inches tall, Hoffman got his first taste of acting as a schoolboy in the role of Tiny Tim.

As an adult actor he has gone from success to success and has a good chance for the Oscar this year in a wide-open race.

Others nominated for best actor are Jack Lemmon, The China Syndrome; Al Pacino, And Justice for All; Roy Scheider, All That Jazz; and Peter Sellers, Being There.

The Academy Awards will be announced April 14.

Readers who correctly predict the winners for best actor, actress and movie will have a chance to win a trip for two to Hollywood via CP Air, in a contest sponsored by the Victoria Times and VI*90.

There are also five runner-up awards.

Entries have been pouring in at the rate of at least 100 per day.

Tax cheaters better beware!

TORONTO (CP) — Canadians who cheat on their income tax forms will face a much greater chance of going to jail in the future, a senior federal tax official warned Saturday.

James Gourlay told a conference on taxation that a jail term for tax evasion is extremely rare at present. But he said federal prosecutors soon will be pushing courts much harder for prison sentences.

Gourlay said the number of Canadians trying to evade taxes is increasing and fines — even hefty ones — do not seem to carry the social stigma of jail sentences.

Another reason imprisonment will become more common, he said, is that courts are realizing they are using a double standard by fining tax evaders and sending welfare and unemployment insurance cheaters to jail.

Gourlay said that unreported legal and illegal income was costing Canadians more than $3 billion a year in unpaid taxes.

Carter wrestles budget

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter today proposed to cut federal programs by $2.6 billion this fiscal year and $15 billion in 1981 — below budget estimates he made in January — in order to fight mounting inflation.

He urged Congress to approve the cuts, threatened to use his veto if legislators overspend, and said that if that fails he will ask Congress for "a temporary grant of extraordinary budget restraint powers."

"We have a real fight ahead," the president said as he signed the revised budget — the first balanced budget in more than a decade.

Along with the new budget came a stark, new estimate of inflation ahead from the president's Council of Economic Advisers.

They now project consumer prices will rise 13.9 per cent during 1980, which would make this the worst inflation year since an 18.2 per cent rise in 1946 after Second World War economic controls were lifted.

Charles in city Tuesday

(See photo page 2.)

The provincial government laid on a reception for the prince's first-ever visit to Vancouver at 7 p.m. in the waterfront Bayshore Inn.

Tuesday morning will see him down at Vancouver's fishermen's wharf, while the afternoon will be spent at the University of B.C.

He'll be in Victoria just under 36 hours, and residents who want to catch a glimpse of the bachelor heir to the British throne should probably station themselves outside Government House.

He'll fly over from Vancouver late Tuesday night, arriving at Victoria airport at 10 p.m.

The prince will stay at Lt.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving's official residence and Wednesday morning at 8:15 he will leave by car for Pearson College.

The prince will spend the day out at Pedder Bay in meetings of the International Council of World Colleges, of which he is president.

Government House expects him back about 5:10 p.m. for a reception starting at 6:30 p.m.

Then it's off to the Royal Theatre at 8:20 p.m. for Pearson College's annual benefit show, featuring performances by its students from all over the world.

Floating highway to Vancouver?

By AL FORREST

Former provincial cabinet minister Sam Bawlf today unveiled a $2 billion floating bridge proposal to link Vancouver Island and the mainland and head off a crisis in the ferry system.

The alternative, Bawlf said, is to endure ferry lineups of four to six hours when the ferry system reaches saturation point as early as 1983.

He said the bridge, if started this year, could be completed by 1986.

It would allow two-way car traffic.

It would also operate on a toll system so there would be no mass migration of traffic to Victoria

"We would not be opening the floodgates, we would simply be dealing with present behavior but through a fixed link. Tolls would be comparable to ferry rates."

He estimated freight and passenger tolls would bring in $750,000 a day and the bridge would pay for itself in 15 years.

An additional $1 billion could be saved by using the fixed link as a corridor for additional power lines and the proposed natural gas pipeline.

Bawlf was commenting on the publication of a ferry traffic study commissioned in 1978 when he was in charge of the B.C. Ferry Corporation.

Figures in the report, prepared by Acres Consulting Services Ltd., indicate the alternative is to spend $1 billion in the next ten years to expand terminals and build additional ferries.

At the end of the decade further spending would be needed because of the continual growth, Bawlf said.

Bawlf said a fixed link with the mainland would provide a permanent solution to the crisis. A tunnel is one option but a floating bridge might be better.

He suggested the bridge could start at Tsawwassen and end in the Duncan-Ladysmith area.

Because of the additional traffic, a new fast highway route from Duncan to Victoria would be needed, bypassing the Malahat.

This new highway route is already in the discussion stage, Bawlf said.

The bridge would involve submerged floating pontoons with piers constructed upwards. The bridge would be several feet above the water and would not be subjected to wave action.

The bridge would be submerged to form a floating tunnel at one point to allow ships to pass through.

"The technology has already been perfected for a project of this scale."

The problem facing the ferry fleet, Bawlf said, is that in 1979 there was an average of 20,000 people carried daily on ferries between Vancouver Island and the Lower Mainland.

On a peak day in summer, the load reached 60,000.

Ten years from now, at present growth rates, the daily average will be almost 50,000 and the load on a peak summer day will hit 150,000.

"That's 150,000 people in a single day. That's why I said the furore over the Princess Marguerite was a tempest in a teapot in terms of its effect on Vancouver Island.

"A passenger load of 150,000 in a day represents about 100 trips of the Marguerite."

"We need an expression of opinion from all sections of the province. This is a provincial concern," Balwf said, adding he is convinced the government will not spend $2 billion on a project of this magnitude without a clear expression of widespread public support.

If the idea is approved in principle, the next step would be a technical feasibility study this year, taking nine months and costing about $1 million.

Stage three would be construction.

The fixed link might carry cars or simply rail rapid transit.

"It is the principle that has to be resolved first, and armored cars were ordered out "to restore order."

Reports differed sharply on how the violence started Sunday in the litter-strewn square adjacent to Metropolitan Cathedral.

"They were just running all over each other," a witness said of the people in the square, who left hundreds of shoes behind as they fled for safety.

Officials said 12 of the dead were women, 11 of them trampled to death and another shot. A 10-year-old girl suffered a fatal gunshot wound to the right eye.

El Salvador's ruling civilian-military junta blamed leftist militants for the shooting and said they had planned to steal the body of Romero.

Several cars were burned and some shops looted before security forces established order. Troops patrolled the city in force early today.

Ten months ago about 25 people were shot on the steps of the cathedral. Leftist militants and security forces accused each other of provoking that incident.

A government statement said security forces could not have started Sunday's shooting because they were confined to barracks. It said the troops were only called out after the violence erupted.

However, a British bishop caught up in the violence was quoted today as saying the trouble began when security forces reacted with guns and bombs to a peaceful procession by leftist mourners.

whether we want a fixed link with the mainland. We also have to consider the alternatives."

Bawlf said the only visible alternative is a rapid expansion in the ferry fleet which would cost millions of dollars without providing any long-term solution.

If a fixed link is approved, the present ferry system could be supplemented by jetfoils to carry through the crisis years from 1983 and 1986, the earliest date when a floating bridge could be completed.

Bawlf suggested the B.C. Ferries Corporation should order jetfoils at the rate of two a year for delivery starting 1983. By late 1985 it would have six jetfoils, at a total cost of about $75 million.

The provincial government has begun a study of the fixed-link proposal. Science Minister Pat McGeer held a meeting last week with international tunnel experts.

Land wanted for space pad

WINNIPEG (CP) — An Ontario company wants to lease land in the city to be used for installing launch pads for future inter-planetary travel.

In a letter to city council, Rolland Lachapelle said his company, Astro Amusements, is anxious to obtain a 50-year lease on 75 acres of land, preferably inside existing parks or beach areas. Lachapelle said his company will give the city five per cent of the net profit each year.

The city finance committee is to deal with the request on Tuesday.

Aid for elderly 'killer'

EASTWOOD, Md. (AP) — Sympathetic letters from around the U.S. are pouring in to a quiet 68-year-old retiree charged with killing a teenager he says threw snowballs at his house.

Next month Roman Welzant will be tried for second-degree murder, assault with intent to commit murder and related firearms counts.

Despite this, people are contributing to a defence fund. More than $1,700 has been collected, in small contributions, many from elderly people.

To many, Welzant has become a symbol of the oppressed, elderly American, living on a fixed income, fearful of assault or robbery.

More than 10 years ago, Welzant began having skirmishes with local teenagers who hung out behind his rowhouse in this blue-collar Baltimore suburb.

His war, for that is what it became, reached a climax Jan. 4 when he allegedly shot and killed Albert Kahl, 18, and injured James Willey, 16. His lawyer, Russell White, said the teenagers had thrown snowballs at his house, then assaulted Welzant when he went outside to identify them.

Over the years, Mr. and Mrs. Welzants said their house was stoned and battered with snowballs in the winter, eggs at Halloween. They said their lawn and hedge were set on fire, their car was damaged.

Fearing reprisals, they have fled their home of 26 years where they planned to spend their retirement years together.

Break in Iran crisis soon?

MacBride and that MacBride had declared that U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance "has agreed upon this proposal." Ghotbzadeh did not elaborate and MacBride refused to say what he had recommended.

Ghotbzadeh, in an interview with the official Iranian news agency Pars, said he plans to travel to Arab capitals soon, once tensions are reduced — perhaps an indication a breakthrough is imminent.

The report of the council's decision on the hostages came after a White House spokesman admitted President Carter sent messages last week to Bani-Sadr but denied a report from Tehran that the White House admitted making mistakes in its policies toward Iran.

Presidential press secretary Jody Powell was forced to make the admission after the Swiss government confirmed that its ambassador in Tehran delivered two messages from Carter to Bani-Sadr, early last week and on Sunday.

But Powell insisted that his denial of the Iranian announcement of the first message was accurate because of the way he phrased it.

Radio Tehran announced Saturday that Carter sent a message to Khomeini saying the Carter administration "inherited a very sensitive international situation which is the result of other policies and circumstances and made all of us commit mistakes in the past."

In another development, Iranian authorities say they have found a murdered student's diaries detailing her alleged sexual relations with an American hostage identified as Michael Moeller.

B.C. PCs' leadership convention set for fall

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. branch of the Progressive Conservative Party will hold a leadership convention sometime between Oct. 17 and Nov. 17, provincial party president Joan Gillanders said Sunday.

"There has been talk that the national party will be holding an annual meeting in the fall, so we don't want to conflict with that meeting by scheduling our meeting on the same weekend," she said.

The party has been without a leader since Vic Stephens resigned last month.

Gold falls, silver holds

Times News Services

Gold fell back below the $500 U.S.-an-ounce mark today in London after an early morning rally. Silver held steady after last week's panic selling and the U.S. dollar rose.

Gold, which lost $48 in London last week, was fixed by the city's big five dealers at $494.50 ($587.61 Canadian), still up from Friday's close of $480.50 ($570.97) but down from this morning's fix of $503.25 ($598.01).

Silver, which lost $9 last week after peaking in mid-January at around $50 an ounce, was quoted in London this morning at $13.25, down from $13.50 Friday.

In New York, Bache Group Inc. said today it faces the possible loss of $50 million from silver accounts maintained by the Hunt family, but said the brokerage firm still has adequate capital to continue in business.

The company said there was "a potential loss of $10 million" in the accounts maintained by Nelson Bunker Hunt and his family at Bache Halsey Stuart Shields Inc., the company's major American brokerage subsidiary.

In addition, it said two other subsidiaries, Bache Halsey Stuart Metal Co. and Bache Halsey-Stuart, London Ltd., had potential losses totalling $40 million in the Hunt accounts.

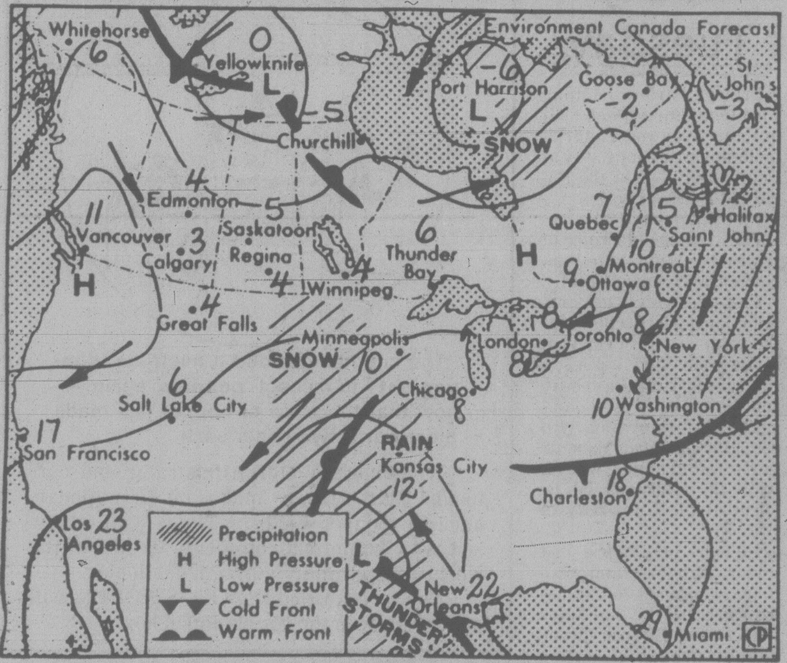

Map valid until noon Tuesday

A frontal system crossing the south coast early today was producing some rain over southwestern portions of the province and some snow over the central interior. The precipitation will spread eastward across the province becoming spotty as the system weakens. A ridge building in the wake of the disturbance promises some sunshine for much of the province on Tuesday. However, another system from the Gulf of Alaska is expected to spread more cloud and precipitation onto the north coast later Tuesday.

Public aid vital in crime fight

By AB KENT

Canada has been more successful than most countries in joining the community to the criminal justice system, say two police work consultants.

Ray Palardy, a Calgary policeman seconded to the solicitor general's office, is serving a term as national consultant on preventative policing.

He was in Victoria for a conference on prevention through environmental design.

Palardy and his immediate predecessor Vic Rollins, of Ottawa, said in an interview police forces in this country are becoming more integrated with other community institutions in order to combat crime in a professional way.

"Canada has been more successful than most countries in the past few years," Palardy said.

"We've done more than the U.S. has done in 30 years. We've seen their mistakes and profitted from them."

Rollins said police can't handle crime all alone.

"The communith has got to be involved," he stressed.

Rollins said total participation in the system includes the police and their guiding bodies — police boards and attorneys-general, local councils responsible for raising tax monies, social agencies, counsellors, churches, the YMCA, schools and volunteer groups.

Palardy said police must be aware of public concerns, priorities and responsibilities and assist in the development of skills and awareness to deal with them.

Huge resources at present go into the investigation and solution of crimes — the reactive or traditional role of police.

What makes more sense, Rollins and Palardy agreed, is an emphasis on crime prevention, using police to organize the community so that departmental resources may be better used.

They said police departments are finding that communities want to be a part of the prevention system.

But police need new skills themselves to be able to provide the necessary leadership.

Palardy said the Neighborhood Watch and Block Parent programs are useful steps in the desired direction.

But people should not be too quick to judge when crime statistics appear to take an upward spurt when public awareness is first stimulated.

He said crime reports rise initially because incidents that formerly were ignored and unreported are suddenly accorded status by the people involved.

Suddenly, assaults, thefts, burglaries, frauds and other illegal activities previously regarded as insignificant or ignored, come to light.

"The rapes and thefts were there before — they just weren't reported," Palardy said.

Ater a period of time as preventative works takes effect, the rate declines.

Both officers said that with more total involvement in the community, police can concentrate manpower in areas where intensive investigation is a necessity, such as organized and white collar crime.

Even in domestic troubles — where most violent crime occurs — the involvement and awareness factor helps police lead the parties to the kind of professional help they need from counsellors, physicians and financial advisors.

Power export until 1984 authorized

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Hydro has been authorized to continue exporting surplus electricity to the United States until 1984.

Ron Monk, a spokesman for the Crown-owned utility, said he has received verbal confirmation from the National Energy Board that Hydro's licence application has been approved.

Monk said specific details will not be known until written approval is received but it appears there will be few, if any, revisions to the original application.

The application sought approval to sell 10,032 gigawatt hours each year to the U.S. A gigawatt is one billion watts.

Monk said Hydro's previous five-year licence permitted the utility to sell 9,000 gigawatt hours each year but the company only sold 7,000 gigawatts during the five-year period.

The spokesman said the previous experience demonstrates that Hydro might not sell as much electricity to the U.S. as the licence allows.

Hydro sends surplus electricity south to the northwest power grid which stretches as far south as California.

Pair plucked from death

CALGARY (CP) — Bill Halpin was driving his two sons to a hockey tournament during the weekend when he saw a car plunge 10 metres off the highway and into a lake.

The car broke through the ice of Mara Lake, 30 kilometres east of Salmon Arm Saturday and the water was so dark Halpin could barely see the vehicle, he said.

But the Calgary school teacher spotted a girl sinking and "I was just able to grab her hair."

"It was like pulling up a seal — just dead weight," he said. "It was just an amazing feeling."

"She must have been unconscious in the water because she didn't move, but as soon as I got her out she started screaming."

Suddenly he realized she was trying to tell him another person was still trapped in the car.

"Another driver came along then and he held onto me as I reached down and banged on the car door.

"The water was so dark I couldn't see anyone in there, but he (the man inside) heard my banging and crawled over to my side.

"It was lucky because he had a pocket of air to breathe. It kept him from panicking but he couldn't have gotten out on his own.

"The water was so cold he could barely move and I had to pull him out through the car window."

Halpin, 52, said if he hadn't been there the two persons would be dead. Kary Lyn Koski, 21, who was five months pregnant, and Rick De Carlo, 24, both of Kelowna, were saved.

Ex-judge's funeral Tuesday

VANCOUVER (CP) — A funeral service will be held Tuesday for former newspaperman and provincial court judge Reginald James Stanley Moir. Moir, who retired from the bench last year, died Friday.

Moir was executive editor at the old Vancouver News Herald in the 1930s, and city editor of the Province in the 1940s. He left journalism at the age of 40 to study law at University of B.C.

He was appointed a magistrate in 1967 and named to the provincial court bench in 1971.

He is survived by his wife, four daughters and a son.

EVERY IMPRESSION SAYS THEY SHOULD COST MORE.

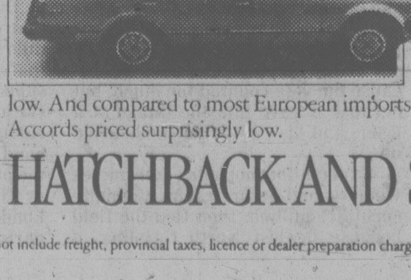
The styling is tight and concise. And everything fits into place. That's the immediate thing you notice when you first see an Accord Hatchback or Sedan. And upon closer inspection that impression grows. The finish is refined. The detailing is impeccable. These are no run-of-the-mill imports, or mass-produced domestics, these are finely crafted automobiles in the truest sense of the word. That's your first impression, and that impression says they should cost more.

Inside, the impression continues. The detailing and finishing inside are as impeccable as they are outside. The fully reclining bucket seats are contoured and comfortable. There's a remote control to open the trunk or hatchback. The Sedan has a remote control to operate the rear door locks. There's even a coin box on the dash for parking change. From the driver's point of view, they're driver's cars. With everything falling immediately to hand. And to eye, with a tachometer, speedometer and the other necessary lights and gauges to tell you what's happening, when.

From the passenger's point of view, they're passenger cars. With cloth faced seats for winter warmth. A heating and ventilation system that distributes warm or cool air evenly throughout the car. And a standard AM/FM sound system.

Once again, those impressions say the cars should cost more. Next comes the 'raison d'etre'; driving an Accord. The 5-speed transmission (or the optional Hondamatic with overdrive), the 1.6 litre OHC engine, the front wheel drive, the rack and pinion steering and the fully independent suspension all add up to a driving experience that has to be experienced.

These are the impressions that you get from an Accord Hatchback or Sedan. But they could lead you to a false conclusion, that the cars cost more than they actually do. If you compare an Accord to an equally equipped domestic you'll find it's priced quite low. And compared to most European imports you'll find the Accords priced surprisingly low.



THE HONDA ACCORDS. HATCHBACK AND SEDAN.

Manufacturer's suggested list price for the 1980 Honda Accord Hatchback and 4-door Sedan. Price does not include freight, provincial taxes, licence or dealer preparation charges. Dealer may sell for less.

Disconnected

Can the provincial government really be serious about wanting regulatory control over B.C. Tel? To say that it wants to replace the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) as the telephone rate overseer and then to ignore B.C. Tel's latest rate increase application doesn't make sense.

Whether B.C. Tel's application before the CRTC for a 12.5 per cent rate increase is necessary is only half the issue. The provincial government, which presumably has the time and expertise to analyse such matters, should ensure that the province's consumers are getting a fair shake. The company's track record over the past two or three years should make Communications Minister Pat McGeer sceptical about B.C. Tel's money requirements and the CRTC's ability to keep the company's ambitions in check.

The telephone company — which has virtually a monopoly position in B.C. — says it needs the rate hike (an interim increase this summer and a further 7.5 per cent in December) to finance new building projects. The CRTC heard a similiar story two years ago and granted a 15 per cent increase, the full amount applied for.

The following year B.C. Tel collected $25 million more than was allowed under the federal government's anti-inflation guidelines, the result of the rate hike the previous year.

B.C. Tel employees who received wage increases above the anti-inflation guidelines were ordered to pay them back. But the company, rather than return the excess profits to the consumers, was allowed to keep the money in return for not raising rates in 1979.

In 1979, however, the CRTC found that B.C. Tel still could not absorb the excess revenue and ordered the company to return $7 million to its customers.

That sort of history is sufficient reason for the provincial goverment to play a watchdog role on behalf of its constituents when the CRTC hearings convene. The duty is underlined by the province's desire to bring the regulation of phone rates under the umbrella of the proposed B.C. Public Utilities Commission.

It's not as though the B.C. government would be breaking new ground. Under both New Democratic and Social Credit governments, the province has intervened at CRTC hearings on phone rate increases. McGeer should not shrug off this latest application as solely a federal government responsibility.

Paying for years

Like the forlorn homeowner faced with renewing a mortgage or the first time home buyer shopping for a mortgage, local elected officials are looking for a deal. The success of their annual sojourn into the national and international money markets can affect individual tax notices for years.

Municipalities and regional districts planning large projects such as sewer and water installations are have to find ways of financing expenditures worth millions of dollars. To avoid the confusion and expense of dozens of municipalities all shopping for dollar bargains at the same time, the borrowers use an agency known as the Municipal Finance Authority to raise their major capital money requirements.

This year the MFA has approved requests from 49 municipalities and 16 regional districts to raise a total of $63.6 million, including $7.5 million for the Capital Regional District. The bulk of that sum ($49 million) will be spent on sewer and water projects. Including the $63 million, the MFA will have obtained some $660 million since 1971 for the province's municipalities.

Most of the money raised on behalf of individual municipalities is repaid by them over 20 or 25 year periods. Obviously a one or two point jump in interest rates has a profound effect on the total amount to be repaid.

The chairman of the MFA, Kelowna alderman Jim Stuart, says the authority is hestitant about entering the market at all at the present time because of the prevailing high interest rates. But he notes it is doubtful there will be any improvement in the near future.

Eventually the money will be raised to pay for the services demanded by taxpayers. Taxpayers, however, should keep in mind that they are footing the bills for these millions of dollars in loans for years to come.

Neither sensible nor explicable

PRESIDENTIAL
©1980

WASHINGTON — The United States is about one-third of the way through its presidential primary process, a procedure that produces giggles, puzzlement and indignation on both sides of the Canada-U.S. border.

There have been 13 primaries, with 24 still to come — the next ones are in Wisconsin and Kansas on April 1.

The 37 primary contests are conducted in 35 states, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico and the District of Columbia. The remaining states use various forms of caucus to select delegates for the nominating conventions that choose party candidates.

The system, not to put too fine a point on it, is loony.

Or, as Senator Bob Packwood of Oregon puts it, "No decision of this magnitude is made with so little logic."

Sidestep bosses

Primaries were invented to get around the nomination of party bosses, who hand-picked candidates through most the 19th century. "I don't care who does the electing," said William Marcy Tweed, the Democratic boss of the 1860s "as long as I do the nominating."

The boss system was open to manipulation, pressure and corruption, and the first primary was introduced in Wisconsin in 1903 to instruct delegates to follow the wishes of voters, not bosses.

The new mechanism was so obviously superior that it gradually spread, until today three-quarters of all delegates who will assemble for the Republicans in Detroit this July and for the Democrats in New York this August, will have been directly chosen by primary voters.

Unfortunately, they will not have been chosen the same way. Because the process built up over decades and because the states and the parties have jealously guarded their rights to control the primaries, there is no uniformity about them.

There are "beauty contest" primaries — non-binding tests of popularity — and binding primaries, in which delegates are required by law to plump for the chosen man.

There are winner-take-all contests, in which whoever gets the most votes in the state gets all the delegates, and proportional primaries, in which the delegates are divided among the candidates in accord with their percentages of the vote.

There are "open" primaries, where the voter reads on the ballot which delegates support which candidates and "blind" primaries, where the voter has to know ahead of time — or guess.

In some states, only registered Democrats can vote in the Democratic primary, and Republicans on the GOP side; in others, "cross-over" voting is permitted.

And there are endless variations of these basic rules from state to state and between the parties in each state.

To this mish-mash of rules is added another complication: Timing. New Hampshire, perhaps the most untypical state — tiny, white, poor, badly educated, resolutely redneck — has become the nation's bellwether by virtue of a state law setting the local primary one week ahead of anyone else's.

Good theory

This ensures that, every presidential year, the place is awash with journalists scaling its craggy hills and craggier voters.

It was a humiliating loss in New Hampshire that forced Robert Dole out of the Republican race, not because the vote counted for much, but because it gave him the image of a loser, and his campaign funds dried up.

Expectation, not logic, determines winners and losers. John Connally spent $11 million, then fled the field because he lost North Carolina, a state that wasn't worth a tinker's dam in delegates but which he was expected to win.

Teddy Kennedy's, expiring campaign came alive last week because he won in New York, a state the pundits had assigned to President Carter.

Carter still has more than twice as many delegates committed to him as Kennedy has, but now his campaign is lurching.

In short, the mixed bag of primaries is neither sensible nor explicable.

Rumor has it that a Washington man once understood the system in its entirety, but he died of the head-staggers before he could pass on the secret.

Candians, watching the antics here, are inclined to smiles of smug self-satisfaction, until they reflect that their nation is still bound to the system that the United States threw over — the party boss system.

During the last leadership contest, that of the Conservatives in 1976, a mild hubbub arose when it turned out that a slate of Quebec City delegates supposedly chosen by the riding association was in fact picked by the riding president at dinner beforehand. There was nothing new about the process, only about the publicity.

There was another demur when a London, Ont., group proposed to ask party members about their leadership preferences before choosing convention delegates. The party killed that.

There was to be no interference from the mob in picking a leader.

Canadians hold to a view expressed by George Mason in 1787: "It would be as natural to refer the choice of a proper character for chief magistrate to the people as it would be to refer a trail of colors to a blind man."

Instead, Canadians prefer slates of selected powerbrokers who then deal with each other across or beneath or behind the convention hall.

In 1976, 24 million Americans helped choose their parties' leader while 2,600 Canadians picked Joe Clark.

The problem with the primary system is not its theory — in theory it is far more open and democratic than any other process — but its practice. All it requires is a set of uniform, nation-wide rules for binding, proportional primaries held on regulated dates.

Just such a set of rules was proposed by the Winogard Commission here in 1978 and it is only a matter of time until it is adopted.

When that happens, the United States will have a leadership selection process far more open, involving and democratic than anything north of the border.

Not vigilantes

We are writing this letter in response to a recent article entitled "They'll Bring Rape Facts Home" printed on March 15.

Victoria Rape/Assault Centre offers confrontation as one of several options a woman has, along with the police, the court system, criminal compensation, Human Rights Branch, civil courts. The confrontation tactic described in the article, i.e. a group of women "chanting" at the home of the rapist is the description of the reporter, Mike Hughes. We assured him at the time that chanting was not the type of action we would pursue, nor do we keep a confrontation tactic "ready in cases where we suspect a rapist has gone unpunished." This lends a misleading tone to the article which sounds as though the centre takes independent action to "punish" rapists. The point of the exercise is to give the woman back the emotional strength she lost when she was assaulted, without waiting a year in the court system to speak out about it.

As Victoria lawyer, Jane Henderson, commented: "Very few rapists are ever convicted and even then there is very little satisfaction for the victim by the time she gets through the legal wringer."

Nevertheless, the role of the Rape/Assault Centre is to provide support and information. We neither pressure nor discourage a woman in making her decision. We hope this letter will go a little way towards rectifying the negative, hysterical image produced by the article. It is more important to question the necessity of confrontation rather than to conjure up the image of a vigilante group out harassing "innocent" men. — Staff, Victoria Rape/Assault Centre.

Asking too much

Victoria Times cartoonist, Bullo, and Shirley Wilde, in her letter to you, both of which appeared on March 24, very accurately reflect the sentiments of many of the unfortunate taxpayers who fall under the jurisdiction of the Capital Regional District Board.

We are indeed revolted by the demands from regional directors seeking increases in pay of from 15 to 56 per cent, and in addition a $35 daily living allowance over and above their hotel bills when attending out-of-town meetings. Have these people no pride in having offered their services and been elected to serve their community in an honest and upright way? Mr. Jim Campbell, the chairman, is noteworthy: he has said he will not consider adding 15 per cent to his fees. But Mr. Couvelier misjudges the mood of his municipality when he says he is in favor of such increases.

If directors think they are underpaid, they should make this part of their platform at election time. As it is, when we consider the polluted beaches under the jurisdiction of the CRD, many of us think the CRD should pay us taxpayers recompense for their inadequacies. — Monica B. Coombs, 1960 Waterloo Road.

Help for Perth

The traditionally adventurous spirit of Scots will undoubtedly mean that among readers of the Victoria Times there will not only be those with strong Scottish ties but perhaps those with fond memories of Perth, once the home of the Scottish Parliament.

Perth has a very rich mediaeval heritage and during the past five or six years an enthusiastic team of archaeologists has striven to retrieve evidence of this in the face of extensive redevelopment. Unfortunately, the rate of redevelopment has outstripped the official financial assistance in the form of a share of a now-depleted government grant.

A local support group has been formed to raise funds to minimize the risk of an archaeological excavation being halted through lack of funds. it is to your sumpathetic readers that, as chairman of the Perth Support Group, I am appealing for help.

We are actively engaged in many different ways to raise funds within Perth itself, but if any of your readers would like to associate themselves with this urgent task, we would be delighted to hear from them. Donations are being channelled to: The Perth Support Group, c/o Bank of Scotland, St. John Street, Perth, Scotland.

It goes without saying that should any of your readers, whether contributors to the group or not, be visiting Perth at any time in the future, we will be very happy indeed to show them the results of our efforts to monitor and preserve Perth's ancient history.

I should add that it is now unquestionably accepted that Perth's archaelogical excavations rank among the most important in Europe. — Dr. Margaret Stewart, Chairman, Perth Support Group, the Scottish Urban Archeology Unit.

Royal banky

Re: Jake Banky's column, The House, March 22:

Protect the Sasquatch has its merits, Jake. Do you have any idea of what it would cost to make it bilingual? I noticed you just said banky (in the banky solution to the western independence problem) and not Royal banky as that word has been thrown right out of the Eastern Canada you subscribe to. In Western Canada it is still said in closed circles as a defiance against the establishment.

I don't propose to sell out to the Yanks but I do resent the money I'm paying out for the culture, heritage and bilingual arts I'm getting. Hasn't any one in the news media told the Central Power that we have or did have our own heritage and language in Western Canada.

Of the three choices we have, the American connection I would choose second, because of the similarity of our culture and language. My last choice would be the federal immersion course where after surfacing you are expected to hop all over everything you grew up to love and respect.

If the Queen hasn't been too humiliated by her treatment from Eastern Canada, perhaps she will consent to be the head of The Dominion of Western Canada.

Anniversary

This year Sakatchewan is celebrating the 75th anniversary of its provincehood. Tisdale and other nearby communities are planning celebrations to suitably observe the occasion.

Tisdale, the Land of Rapeseed and Honey, is planning a homecoming that will take place on June 30 and July 1. Registration will be on June 30 and the program for July 1 will include an ecumenical church service, a community breakfast and other such events. Special entertainment is being planned for young people.

More information about our celebration can be obtained by former district residents by writing to the Tisdale and District Homecoming Committee, Box 1090, Tisdale, Sask. S0E 1T0.

Other area celebrations planned include those for Eldersley on August 2, Golburn at their fair on August 6; Sylvania on July 26 and 27; Connaught at the fair on July 29 and 30; Star City on July 4, 5, 6 and 7; Ridgedale on August 2 and 3; McKague on August 2 and 3; and New Osgoode and Forester on July 31. Further information on these celebrations can be obtained from the Celebrate Saskatchewan committees they have formed. — Rosemary O'Bertos, Chairperson of the Tisdale and District Homecoming Committee.

Victoria Landmarks

Set in the Causeway wall, behind the statue of Captain Cook, 31 plaques commemorate some ships in our local past. Although not listed chronologically, the earlier ships are to your left when facing the harbor.

First is the Hudson's Bay Company's Cadboro, 1842, when James Douglas was examining the harbor. H.M. gun vessel Sparrowhawk was on this station 1865-68. (670 tons, 4 guns, wrote Walbran).

Mentioned, too, is the Hudson's Bay Company's Otter. (Built to assist the Beaver, Walbran wrote). On her in 1855 was Captain Henry Glide, the first licensed pilot. This plaque was presented by B.C. Coast Pilots.

The Beaver was here in 1843 with Sir James Douglas as Fort Victoria was being constructed. In 1850, H.M.S. Driver brought Richard Blanshard, first governor of the colony of Vancouver Island.

In 1855 Mr. and Mrs. Edward Cridge arrived on the Marquis of Bute. Matthew Baillie Begbie arrived in 1858 on the U.S. ship Panama.

The Tory came in 1851 with William John Macdonald, later Mayor of Victoria, Senator of Canada.

The Sea Bird, 1858, came with the first four sisters of St. Ann. Also in 1858, the American paddle steamer Commodore brought California gold miners for Fraser's River.

H.M.S. Warspite, the Robert Lowe, the Harpooner — The litany of names, continuing into this century, is indeed like a long parade of ships.

Neatness counts

The mood of next spring's fashion is one of gilt-edged innocence. Decadence has had its day. No more tie-dyed T-shirts and faded jeans, no more studied sloppiness, no more aching by the newly rich to look like the nouveau pauvre.

The word that sums up the rage of the fashion world is "preppie," from "prep school," denoting those institutions organized in pre-Scott Fitzgerald times to prepare the children of the elite for higher education. Suddenly, neatness counts, the buttons are down, the sweaters and skirts are back, and grown-ups — lusting, as always, after the fashions of their children — are pretending that prep-school days are here again. Women's Wear Daily, which coined "midiskirt" in the '60s, insists it did not coin the adjective "preppie," but certainly has done much to make it the trigger word in fashion terminology this year. With thanks to Eleanor Lambert, a fashion czarina who never went to prep school, here are the cliches you need to drape around your tongue this year:

Swingy: A garment cut to swirl around the figure as the wearer moves. The big-band word is the title of a musical produced by Stuart Ostrow on its way to Broadway. "To swing out" is a phrase traced in its current fashion sense to 1851: Hall's College Words defined it then as "to appear in something new." ("Swingy" is spelled with a "y," in contrast to "preppie," most often spelled with an "ie" — the latter is intended to be feminine.)

Innocent dress: A Victorian or Edwardian outline, usually in sheer white cotton with lace insertions and a ribbon sash, suggesting the time of junior proms and debutante cotillions. Worn with a Fifth Amendment corsage.

Veranda dress: Slightly jazzier than the Innocent dress, harking back to an era when courting took place on outside porches, and "spooning" and "sparking" were the terms for today's "making out." ("Making out," which used to mean "going all the way," now most often means merely "necking and petting," also called "smoochin' and fussin'.")

Handkerchief hemline: The bottom of this skirt dips in points, like an upside-down man's handkerchief. This contrasts with a trumpet flare, close-fitting at the hip and flaring out at the hem, looking like Satchmo's horn, and the tulip skirt, also called the bubble skirt, which is full from the waist to the knee, where it tucks up into a narrow hem and restricts the stride.

Asymmetric, describing a garment cut to emphasize diagonal lines and an off-centre effect, is a word associated with designer Halston, who describes his style as "clean." He tells me that the conservative, back-to-prep-school fashion reflects political and economic trends: "As the word of the '70s was 'quality,' the word of the '80s is 'value.' " Looking beyond preppiness, he foresees a return to extravagance at night.

But today's woman has taken her cue from the slogan of the Boy Scouts: "Be preppie" speaks to an era three generations back, to a stage in life a rich teen-ager experienced before setting out for the Ivy League. Innocence may be our plea, but a certain feminine hardiness undergirds the preppie fashion, recalling those stern-faced pioneer women who set out across this continent in covered buttons.

Watch your baggage

Sometimes politicians carry "baggage," a word that has come to mean "unwanted burdens," the equivalent of an albatross perched on the shoulder. Sometimes historical phrases carry such baggage, and the user cannot always find a redcap to handle the unintended associations.

Our hod-carrying State Department spokesman, who trendily substituted "this" for "the," said after the United Nations commission had glumly left Tehran: "This government believes that the situation requires, first, watchful waiting."

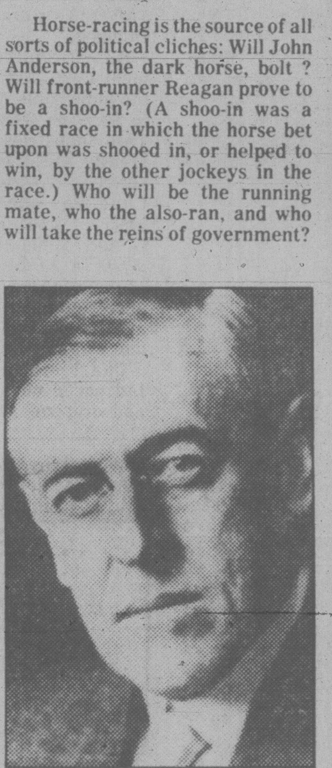
Putting "watchful" before "waiting" gives a kind of purpose to hanging around, and it has a Wilsonian ring to it. That's because Woodrow Wilson said it. On Dec. 2, 1913, he reported to Congress about America's relations with Mexico, where a dictator had temporarily detained some United States seamen: "We shall not, I believe, be obliged to alter our policy of watchful waiting."

Four months later, President Wilson sent 4,000 marines to take Veracruz; the bloodletting in association with this assertion of national prestige cannot be what the present State Department spokesman had in mind.

Better phrases, with less baggage, were coined by Sir James Mackintosh in the early 19th century: "masterly inactivity" went over well, topped only by his "disciplined inaction." Until President Carter's spokesmen can find a similar term for resolute irresolution, they are better advised to let the dust settle.

Rule in

Horse-racing is the source of all sorts of political cliches: Will John Anderson, the dark horse, bolt ? Will front-runner Reagan prove to be a shoo-in? (A shoo-in was a fixed race in which the horse bet upon was shooed in, or helped to win, by the other jockeys in the race.) Who will be the running mate, who the also-ran, and who will take the reins of government?



WILSON . . . short wait

The sport of kings is also the source of a locution that has become a favorite hedge of candidates: "to rule out." This phrase — originally used to mean "to debar a horse from a race" — was absorbed into the general language as a synonym for "exclude" nearly a century ago. The first citation in the Oxford English Dictionary is this 1890 item in The Spectator supporting neologisms: "Resolved not to see expressions ruled out of the language merely because they are new."

A candidate who wants to say, "Let's not get into that," or, "I'd prefer to duck that issue," or even, "I'll jump off that bridge when I come to it," but who does not want to appear indecisive or evasive, makes use of the rule-out construction: "I make no commitments along those lines, but (spoken ominously, or broadmindedly) I don't rule that out." ("Commitment" has replaced the hackneyed "pledge," which replaced the discredited "promise.")

Similarly, newsmen desperate for a lead on a dull day will ask, "Are you ruling out such and such?" If the hapless candidate says, "Hell, I could never do that," the lead becomes "Candidate Forthright today firmly ruled out any consideration of . . . " If the same candidate murmurs, "Do I have to decide that this morning?" the newsman gets his lead the other way: "Candidate Forthright today refused to rule out the possibility of . . . " (When this trap is sprung on a Soviet official, it is called "Russian rule-out.")

Cagey candidates have come up with a defence to rule out roulette: "I'm not ruling it out, but that doesn't mean I'm ruling it in." The odd expression "to rule in" is now current in political usage: Sen. Richard Stone of Florida reported that an administration witness before a Foreign Relations subcommittee "ruled out substantial military bases, but ruled in lightly manned, local facilities."

Keep your eye on "rule in"; as the 1890 Spectator pointed out, it should not be ruled out of the language merely because it is new.

Mobil madness

By IRWIN FRANK
Dallas Times Herald

When it comes to oil, Mobil knows what it's talking about. But when Mobil presumes to speak for the American people, you then have to ask if Mobil — with all its drilling rigs — really knows what 220 million Americans think.

In one recent advertisement Mobil ran in leading newspapers, the company said one of Three Great Lies as seen by Americans is: "I'm from the government and I'm here to help you."

The ad goes on to say that Americans see their government "as a nuisance, a pain, a meddling, nagging, obtrusive, petty, nit-picking, and troublesome pest." It adds that Americans expect "betrayal" from their government.

How does Mobil know that Americans feel that way? On what basis can Mobil say 220 million Americans feel their government is a "nuisance" or a "troublesome pest" that lies to them? And how can Mobil say the American people feel betrayed by their government? Does this giant oil company have the capacity to tap the mind of America?

Well, it turns out that no survey was conducted to determine the mood of America. Don Tuchman, who heads the Editorial Services section at Mobil's New York City office, said Mobil did not conduct any surveys but, well, a "good many surveys in recent years" have shown "that government regulations add a burdensome cost to the economy, a nonproductive cost factor. A great many companies are having to devote a large part of the payroll to process government forms . . . "

There is no question that what Tuchman says about government regulations and paperwork is correct. But, how does Tuchman's staffer Michael O'Malley, who wrote the copy for the ad, translate that into the Americn people feeling betrayed by their government or feeling the government lies to them, is a nuisance, a troublesome pest?

Those are harsh words, strong charges, a damning indictment on the failure of a democracy.

The same ad goes on to say that "whatever the Founding Fathers had in mind, it surely was not a sprawling bureaucracy that busied itself with the sugar on cornflakes . . . "

To invoke the memories of Thomas Jefferson and Benjamin Franklin and say they would not have busied themselves with such issues as cornflakes is misleading at least. Neither would have allowed his children to be fed a breakfast cereal containing 63.7 per cent sugar such as Sugar Snacks, or King Vitaman with 61.6 per cent sugar. Neither would have allowed Lucky Charms, 58 per cent sugar, or Trix, 50.7 per cent sugar, to be fed his children as a food.

But it is hard to know what O'Malley was getting at concerning "a sprawling bureaucrcy that busied itself with the sugar on cornflakes;" because there are no government regulations concerning the amount of sugar manufacturers may put on cornflakes, says the U.S. Bureau of Foods in Dallas.

Why should Mobil be so unhappy? Why is it so angry at the government?

Here is a company which last year ranked third in the United States in terms of revenue with income of $47,900,000,000 — that's 47.9 billion dollars. Mobil had a gain of 28.4 per cent over 1978 in revenues and a 77.7 per cent gain in net income — $2.01 billion. It ranked just behind General Motors and Exxon as the biggest company in the entire country.

If Mobil is angry with a $2 billion net income just imagine how angry Exxon must be at the government. It had a net income of $4.2 billion.

'Israel its own worst enemy'

By I.F. STONE

(Stone is the former publisher and editor of I.F. Stone's Weekly, and the author of numerous books, including Underground to Palestine and Polemics and Prophecies: 1967-1970. He wrote this for The Los Angeles Times)

Dear Abby would no doubt agree: A man who alarms his family by antagonizing his friends and provoking his enemies is in need of "counselling" or more plainly, psychotherapy. The poor fellow is suicide-prone.

The same diagnosis may be applied to nations. It can be said of Israel. Indeed, it must be said more and more clearly if that fledgling state is to survive it must be saved from its own worst enemy — itself.

The latest of its self-inflicted wounds is Prime Minister Menachem Begin's recent decision — approved by only a thin majority in his own cabinet — to expand Israel's settlements from unoccupied land on the West Bank to the very heart of a major Arab city, Hebron.

This illustrates again the leverage that the unstable coalition politics of Israel gives to a small minority of religious fanatics. Seventeen families from the Gush Emunim movement have been "squatting" without authorization in derelict buildings in Hebron, challenging the government to dislodge them.

As a "compromise," the cabinet has voted to build an educational complex around the squatters with no fewer than eight buildings for a seminary and family dormitory, plus a day school for "local Jewish history" students. All this will be at a cost of $12.5 million, which Israel can ill afford. Such "compromises" look like steps toward the ultimate annexation of the West Bank.

Hebron's welcome is ominous. Last Monday, angry Palestinians in Hebron denounced Israel's decision, and Hebron Mayor Fahd Kawasmeh threatened a total boycott of the newcomers, saying, "We will not sell to them, not speak to them, not say shalom to them, not work with them." The next day, schools and shops began to close, and a 24-hour general strike occurred all over the West Bank and East Jerusalem.

Begin's move comes at a time when the Egyptians have been complaining to the White House that in the "autonomy" negotiations the Israelis ar balking even at transferring health clinics to the proposed "administrative council" for the occupied territories.

The hopes of Camp David and the patience of the outside world, including that of many in the Jewish community in the U.S. and elsewhere are being exhausted.

In the heated cabinet debate last Sunday, Begin was asked to put off his inflammatory decision at least until after his scheduled visit with President Carter. But Begin, and Agriculture Minister Ariel Sharon, the most devoted sponsor of the settlements policy, insisted that the president be confronted with another ungracious fait accompli.

On his recent visit to Washington, Sharon exasperated several leaders of the American Jewish community and some of Israel's best friends on Capitol Hill. The Jerusalem Post correspondent in Washington reported angry confrontations and complaints by "pro-Israel members of Congress" that Sharon's abrasive manner and the newly announced expropriations of Arab land north of Jerusalem were making it more difficult for them to get the $200 million aid increase that Israel has asked in this year's budget, in which almost everything else of course is being cut.

Those who wonder why Defence Minister Ezer Weizmann, once a hawk, is now the leading dissenter in Begin's cabinet should read the thoughtful article on "Settlement and Security" in the same issue of the Jerusalem Post by its military correspondent, Hirsh Goodman.

He reported that Weizmann's opposition to the settlements policy springs from its bad effect on the military budget, on strategic planning and on army morale. Goodman writes that for the first time in Israel's history the ugly duties of policing the occupied territories have created unrest and moral revulsion in an army hitherto famous for its resolute zeal.

The religious fundamentalism that bedevils places like Iran and Ulster is also evident in Israel. It, too, has its imams and ayatollahs. Unless they are brought to heel, they can do irreparable damage to Israel and to world peace.

B.C. Packers buys Canadian Fishing plant

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — British Columbia Packers Ltd. has announced it is purchasing processing and service facilities from Canadian Fish Co. Ltd.

B.C. Packers did not disclose the price of the Oceanside cannery and other properties near Prince Rupert, and packing facilities in southern B.C.

The company said the purchase will enable it to "rationalize and upgrade its operations to better meet the challenges facing the industry and company in future years."

B.C. Packers president J. B. Buchanan said the fishing industry in B.C. has suffered severe setbacks recently, including the deterioration of the herring roe industry. As well, the forecast for this year's salmon fishery isn't too bright, he said.

However, he said the company is looking at the purchase as a long-term process.

B.C. Packers now operates two processing plants near Prince Rupert and the purchase of the Oceanside plant will allow the company to consolidate its interests, he said.

Loans available at 5 per cent

TORONTO (CP) — Many thousands of Canadians still can borrow money at annual interest rates of five or six per cent thrugh life insurance policies, spokesmen for the insurance industry say.

What's more, borrowers don't even have to repay the loans.

Frank Dimock, senior vice-president of the Canadian Life Insurance Association (CLIA), said in an interview anyone who took out a whole-life insurance policy before Sept. 1, 1968, probably qualifies for loans against the policy charging interest rates no higher than six per cent, although consumer loan rates now stand at 16.5 to 17 per cent.

A whole-life policy is a contract to provide permanent financial protection, as opposed to term policies which apply for a stated period.

Dimock said a policyholder can borrow against his policy up to an amount slightly less than the cash value.

The money does not have to be paid back but Dimock cautioned that this dilutes the value of the policy. Any amount owing is deducted from the face value when the insurance is paid.

Dimock, whose group represents 16 companies doing about three-quarters of the value of life insurance business in Canada, said the low lending rate on pre-1968 policies dates back to 1935, in the depths of the Depression.

In that year, Canada's insurance industry made a commitment to the federal government not to charge more than six per cent on policy loans. some companies set their ceiling at five per cent.

The commitment was withdrawn on new policies as of Sept. 1, 1968, but remains in force on policies written before that date.

Dimock said that since then some companies have continued to set limits on rates they charge on policy loans while others fix the rates at the time the loan is taken out.

New York

The stock market gave some of its early gains in slower trading this afternoon as market attention returned to longer term uncertainties about the economy.

Analysts described much of the market's early trading strength as a short-lived carryover of strength from Friday's session when the Dow blue chip index was powered to a 17.67 point gain.

The commerce department report of a small decline in the index of leading economic indicators had been expected. But the report, showing the fifth consecutive monthly decline in the index, underscored longer term worries that a recession is imminent and may be more severe than previously forecast, said Monte Gordon of Dreyfus Corp.

President Carter also sent his revised 1981 fiscal budget to Congress on Monday, calling for a bigger budget cuts and forecasting worse inflation but a milder recession than the January forecast had indicated.

London

The Financial Times index gained four points to 425.5.

Industrials and oils rose while golds eased.

Canadian stocks firmed.

By DAN TURNER
FP News Service

OTTAWA — If Canadian homeowners unable to meet their mortgage payments are not smiling, if Canadian businessmen afraid to talk to their bankers are not smiling, if working Canadians afraid of losing their jobs are not smiling, there is this one, small consolation:

Neither is Gerald K. Bouey, governor of the Bank of Canada.

Not when he predicts soaring U.S. interest rates should start coming down before too long. Not when he says he hopes to be able to keep Canadian interest rates below the American rates while they're up so high.

Not even when he says he doesn't see any evidence of "a long and serious depression . . . yet."

Not once in a rare, 22-minute interview does the 60-year-old Bouey smile, which befits a man sitting in the eye of a hurricane, waving a baton in the hopes of having some slight influence on the winds, moving very carefully lest they tear him and his economy to pieces.

From the calculated spareness of his office across Wellington Street from the Parliament Buildings, Bouey confronts two harsh realities with icy concentration.

The first — more than familiar to him after seven years as Canada's central banker — is that the fate of the Canadian economy is overwhelmingly dependent on the fate of the American economy.

The second is that the American economy is submerged in turmoil and confusion.

So sick is the American dollar after decades of balance-of-payments deficits that Martin Mayer, a respected American economist and author of a new book called The Fate of the Dollar, has expressed fear that the greenback's collapse could lead to the breakdown of the entire international monetary system in the 1980s.

So ingrained is the North American inflationary mentality, which is undermining the value of the American and Canadian dollars, that Otto Eckstein, president of Data Resources Inc., offered the following gloomy assessment in a recent interview:

"Eliminating inflation is really beyond our capabilities. There is no way it can be eliminated that is acceptable to our political system. It would take totally effective price-wage controls for years, plus a prolonged, severe recession.

Bouey has not yet sunk into Eckstein's trough of despair, despite the fact he says he has yet to see any evidence that Canadians have come to grips with the problem.

"I think we're up against a difficult short-term period, but that's what everybody concentrates on — the short run. They neglect the fact that once you get your economy healthy again the long run can be pretty good.

"If we keep our inflation under reasonable control and keep our economy competitive there's no reason we shouldn't do well. We're better off than most countries for energy, we've got a lot of resources, and if we put our hearts and minds into it there's no excuse for this country not doing well.

It is difficult to talk about ordinary Canadians feeling the pinch in Bouey's fourth-floor office - no sanctum in the city seems more like an ivory tower with its white walls and pristine off-white carpeting. But Bouey tries.

"It may well be that there will be some slowdown, and a lot depends on how people react to it. If there is an effort to resist that trend by demanding higher wages and higher prices certainly the economy will slow up for a longer time.

"If expectations can be turned around so people can see there is a possibility of inflation easing off I don't see that the costs should be that great. But there may be some.

"I don't see any evidence of a long and serious depression. I don't see any evidence of that yet."

In the short term, with Canadians complaining bitterly about interest rates which leaped to 16.5 per cent for the banks' very best customers last week, Bouey is juggling the use of his economic levers, trying desperately to keep the value of the Canadian dollar at a respectable level without subjecting the economy to the 19- and 20-per-cent interest rates now prevailing in the United States.

Whether he will succeed is still an open question — the Bank of Canada's bank rate — a signal to the chartered banks on interest rate trends — has risen by 1.49 percent over the last two weeks, and the dollar dipped below 84 U.S. cents before rallying somewhat at week's end.

That Canadian interest rates remain 2½ percent below American rates is in itself extraordinary. The Bank's policy has traditionally been to keep the Canadian prime rate one percent above the American rate to maintain Canada as an attractive repository for investment, and by doing so bolster the value of the Canadian dollar.

That Bouey is even trying to retain lower Canadian rates is even more remarkable considering his expressed monomania in recent months for retaining the strength of the dollar.

In his appearance before the Commons finance committee last October he allowed that Canadian interest rates could conceivably be kept equal with or even slightly below foreign rates if foreign investors were sufficiently attracted to Canada by other incentives — for instance, good prospects in energy development, such as offshore oil finds along the lines of the Hibernia oil fields off Newfoundland.

However, he warned, "the scope for Canadian interest rates to lag behind foreign rates is necessarily rather limited, unless we want to invite yet further substantial depreciation of the currency."

In his annual report published just last week he argued vehemently against such a further deterioration, saying that while a low exchange rate for the Canadian dollar has been helpful in promoting Canadian exports in recent times (because it made prices lower and therefore more attractive in foreign markets) it has outlived its usefulness because many Canadian exporters are now running their production facilities at full capacity.

A further drop in the value of the dollar would not boost exports much — because in the short run we can't deliver many more, but would increase our rate of inflation — since goods we import to consume or to upgrade our productaon facilities would cost us more dollars.

But soaring American interest rates — prompted by economic measures introduced earlier this month by the Carter government — has tempered his approach by sending the economic world into "something like a new phase," he says now.

Bouey says the Canadian dollar dipped lower than he would like this week (he will not say exactly where he would like to see it). The most obvious way to strengthen it would be to pull the various levers available to him to raise interest rates, which he did to some degree this week, but seems to be trying to avoid more than anyone who witnessed his testimony at the Commons committee would have predicted.

"One has to worry about the other side — the high interest rates — as well," he says, high rates being a discouragement to the very investment in equipment he hopes to promote in the hopes of boosting Canadian exports.

So he juggles, allowing the interest rates to rise, but not too much, while letting them rise to some degree because his main long-term concern is still the value of the dollar.

"Every drop in the Canadian dollar, if it stays down, adds to our inflation rate quite a bit." It is "silly," he says, to pretend that declines in the dollar have only a measurable, first-round effect on the Canadian inflation rate, because there will be echoing effects as people try to leapfrog past their diminished purchasing power to emerge on top again.

So he sticks to his policy of restraining the country's money supply — the fewer dollars printed, the more they tend to be worth — and lets interest rates rise, "but only by as much as is absolutely necessary."

"I'm perfectly willing to concede that high interest rates are painful for quite a few people, but the alternative — easing monetary policy and making it easy for everybody to borrow — creates inflation that damages everybody.

"I have to be more concerned about the total population than particular groups." What he seems to be counting on is that the Carter government will move to ameliorate the high American rates to appease the electorate, hoping, perhaps, that short-term shock value will at least have been useful.

American observers are divided as to whether Carter will stick with the high rates. Bouey looks for them to start coming down before too long.

"I doubt if anyone expects them to stay up very long. Yes, I think there is some chance we'll get through without our rates being as high as the Americans."

One problem Canada's lower interest rates pose is the possibility of Canadian subsidiaries of American firms borrowing money here for their parent companies.

"I think that would be something we would have to be concerned about," says Bouey. "And it's a situation we'll want to follow."

Bouey's role as governor of the Bank is a delicate one, and the tendency has been to handle it with a prudent, taciturn public face ever since the Diefenbaker government fired James Coyne from the position over a disagreement in policy — always a government's prerogative.

It should have left Bouey in even more delicate circumstances when the Liberals defeated Joe Clark's Conservatives in February. Bouey and Conservative finance critic John Crosbie had mouthed almost identical economic philosophies in terms of fiscal policy: "Short-term pain for long-term gain."

Although the Liberals have been vague about their plans for economic policy, Trudeau did swing back into power under the impression that the party wouldn't be asking the public to make as many sacrifices as the Tories were.

Faced with the uncertainty of Liberal intentions, Bouey made repeated warnings in his annual report that the government would be making a terrible mistake if it loosened up the fiscal purse-strings.

He says he does not consider his public warning to be "extraordinary," but acknowledges "it is true that the tradition around here has been not to comment specifically on fiscal policy and certain steps that should be taken . . .

"But at this stage near full capacity in the economy, when a government has been running as high a deficit as ours has been running, well, it's not a very healthy situation."

Says economist William Mackness of the Toronto brokerage firm of Pitfield, Mackay, Ross: "It is indeed quite unprecedented for the governor to offer advice on the size of the federal deficit. However, the size of the federal deficit is also quite unprecendented."

Does Bouey have any advice as to how the average Canadian might help the situation?

There is no average Canadian, he says. Circumstances vary from person to person. "All I can hope is that they will respond in what seems to them to be a sensible way to the environment around them. If someone has borrowed money to send his son through college, I guess I hope he'd try to go on doing it.

"If someone has borrowed money for something that's much less essential, I hope he'd be influenced by the fact that interest rates are very high.

"What we'd like to do is get through this difficult period. It certainly is an extraordinary one." Nothing to smile about, for sure.

Wage, price curbs loom for U.S.

By LEONARD SILK
New York Times

NEW YORK — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's victories over President Carter in the New York and Connecticut primaries have put the issue of mandatory price and wage controls high on the U.S. political agenda. There is no question that voters are in a state of near-shock over what inflation is doing to their pay, the value of their savings, and their standard of living.

During the past three months, consumer prices have risen at an average rate of 17.2 percent. Since producer prices have been running at an annual rate of over 18 percent, no relief for the consumer is in sight for the next few months. Administration economists concede that Treasury Secretary G. William Miller was unrealistic in forecasting that consumer prices would rise by only 11 percent this year.

Inflation has been taking a heavy toll from workers' earnings. While the average take-home pay of a worker with three dependents rose from $190.38 to $201.26 during the 12 months ending in February, 1980, inflation reduced the actual purchasing power of their after-tax income by 7.4 percent. Families are growing increasingly angry over the struggle to make ends meet, and worried about their future if the inflation continues, or if recession throws them out of work.

Kennedy is taking dead aim at the Carter policies and proposing drastic alternatives, including a freeze on wages, prices, rents, dividends and interest rates, to be followed by mandatory controls when the freeze ends.

The freeze, according to a bill which Kennedy's aides are preparing, could last up to six months, retroactive to March 26 or the date the legislation is introduced. The president could terminate the freeze after 180 days by imposing mandatory controls.

During the freeze, the only prices, wages or other incomes permitted to increase would be those required to correct "gross inequities" or "severe hardship." After the freeze, a mandatory incomes policy would establish standards permitting wage increases in line with productivity gainsand rules governing allowable price passthroughs of rising costs.

Kennedy wants to reinforce this price control program with gasoline rationing, with transferable coupons. He would reduce gasoline consumption from its present level of about 7 million barrels a day by 1.7 million, or about 25 percent, over the next two years. Kennedy's advisers expect most of this cut to come out of imports.

The Kennedy anti-inflation program would also stress "structural" measures aimed at increasing productivity, especially by changing the tax code to permit faster depreciation of capital assets to spur business investment.

The liberal economists sympathetic to Senator Kennedy are not eager to leave "supply side economics" to former Gov. Ronald Reagan and the conservatives in his corner. "For the longer term," writes Barry Bosworth in the new edition of the Brookings Institution's annual volume, Setting National Priorities, "the arguments that government must pay more attention to the supply-side implications of its actions seems compelling." But long-run measures to strengthen supply, he adds, cannot obviate the need for short-term fiscal and monetary restraints to break the momentum of inflation.

Bosworth, the former director of the Carter administration's Wage and Price Council, acknowledges that a program of wage and price controls, restrictions on housing and energy demand, and a continuation of slow demand growth will not be easy measures to sell, even on a temporary basis. The government may be able to tackle the intractable economic problems of inflation, energy and low productivity, he warns, only within a "crisis framework." This, in a nutshell, is the essence of the case for controls, as the focal point of the drive on inflation.

The one constant element in recent inflation, Bosworth argues, has been that "each successive round of government policy has consistently underestimated the magnitude of the problem" and each failure has contributed to a loss of public confidence that the government can solve the problem. This, in a nutshell, is the essence of the case for controls.

Kennedy's staff is keeping a list of economists sympathetic to controls, whether they are likely to support him politically or not. Their list now includes, besides Bosworth, Henry Kaufman of Salomon Brothers, Bruce MacLaury of Brookings, Francis Bator and John Kenneth Galbraith of Harvard, James Tobin of Yale and Felix Rohatyn of Lazard Freres. All of these stress that controls cannot be used as a gimmick, a mere papering over of cracks.

Carter and his aides contend that that is exactly what controls will become. But the electorate, as the New York and Connecticut primaries demonstrated, is growing restless and resistant to ineffectual "gradualism" or climbing unemployment as the answer to inflation.

Rig's leg towed ashore

OSLO (Reuter) — The huge, air-filled steel leg of the Alexander Keilland accommodation rig is being towed into Stavanger Harbor today, grotesque evidence of the world's worst offshore oil disaster.

It will immediately be sealed off from the public for examination by the Norwegian government's four-man inquiry team in an attempt to find out why it snapped off the 11,000-ton rig during a gale Thursday, causing the rig to capsize.

Norwegian Prime Minister Odvar Nordli has declared a day of national mourning today in memory of the 123 dead. Forty-two bodies have been recovered and officials say there is no hope of finding more survivors. A massive air-sea search was abandoned during the weekend.

After the government team inspects the leg, technical experts from Phillips Petroleum Co., which leased the rig to house oil workers in the Ekofisk area of the North Sea, will examine it.

Of the bodies recovered only 10 have been identified. They are all Norwegians.

On Sunday, police released an official list of those believed dead. It includes 94 Norwegians, 24 Britons, two Finns, one West German, one Swede and one Icelander.

Among the 89 survivors are 74 Norwegians, 11 Britons, two Spaniards, one Finn and a Portuguese.

At a news conference Sunday, Nordli paid tribute to the work of Norwegian, British, Danish, West German and Dutch rescue workers during the search and said everything that was humanly possible was done to save lives.

One of the Norwegian trade unions representing oil workers said it plans to press for stricter security regulations on oil installations.

A union spokesman said that some measures, including better and more realistic training and disaster exercises as well as improved equipment for semi-submersible platforms, were suggested before the Alexander Kielland disaster.

Wartime distrust surfaces

Canadian and U.S. intelligence operations during the Second World War were soured by mutual dislike and distrust, says a prominent British naval historian.

Patrick Beesly, who was deputy head of submarine tracking for the Admiralty's wartime Operational Intelligence Centre, made the revelation at a weekend Royal Roads conference on Canada's naval history.

"The Americans distrusted Canadian security and the Canadians resented the superior attitude of their neighbor who entered the war 2½ years after they did," Beesly told conference delegates.

"The appreciations of the three centres, as proposed by our prospective authorities, became a joint affair and were identical," he said.

Pollution probe urged

The Citizens Association to Save the Environment (CASE) is in full support of a request by Victoria NDP MLA Gordon Hanson for establishment of a task force to look into pollution of Greater Victoria's shoreline.

CASE is opposed to the dumping of raw sewage offshore, the organization said.

In supporting Hanson's request, CASE also called on the provincial government to establish a second task force to consider the sequence of events within the CRD and local municipalities.

It called for the second task force to consider alternative methods of handling sewage, terms of reference established by municipalities in calling for engineering studies and proposals and the role of the Pollution Control Branch and the federal environment ministry.

Ice-break tankers eyed for north oil

LONDON (AP) — Shipping magnate Ravi Tikkoo announced a plan Sunday to build powerful ice-breaking supertankers to carry Alaskan oil along Canada's northern coast to Newfoundland.

Tikkoo, born in Kashmir, said the proposed fleet of 350,000-ton oil and gas tankers could carry the entire two million barrel daily production from Alaska's North Slope and bypass the Trans-Alaskan pipeline, cutting transport costs in half.

Tikkoo said building 50 such ships, equipped with 280,000-horsepower engines to power them through the four-metre thick ice of the Northwest Passage, would cost $4.5 billion.

He said the vessels would be five times as powerful as the U.S. tanker Manhattan, which got stuck five times making the passage in 27 days in 1969.

Tikkoo did not say when construction would start.

Mantovani dies at 74

ROYAL TUNBRIDGE WELLS, England (UPI) — Mantovani, the violinist whose use of "tumbling strings" turned easy listening music into big business, died Sunday in a nursing home. He was 74.

The bandleader, who was the first man to sell a million albums in stereo in the United States, had been ill for several years.

MANTOVANI

Once called "the man who could make a hymn out of a rock number," Mantovani's sweetening of somber classics and pop melodies alike won him an adoring audience.

Born Nov. 15, 1905, in Venice, Italy, as Annunzio Paolo, Mantovani was trained as a violinist by his father.

At 16, Mantovani found work in a restaurant band in Birmingham, England, and Sir Thomas Beecham once sent the young man a note of congratulations after hearing him play the Saint-Saens Violin Concerto.

By 1932, the young conductor had formed his famous Tipica Orchestra.

Mantavoni's "tumbling strings" style grew in fame. In 1951, the conductor gathered a 40-piece orchestra to record waltzes, and at the last minute, included a tune called "Charmaine."

A disc jockey in Cleveland, Ohio, played the song again and again, the record was a huge hit, and the American craze for Mantovani began.

Germans flee Soviet threat to 'new world'

BONN (UPI) — Alarmed by the Afghan crisis, more and more west Germans are fleeing to Canada and Australia for a safer life, a news magazine reported Sunday.

Applications to emigrate to the "new world" have multiplied since Soviet troops marched into Afghanistan last December, Der Spiegel news magazine said.

"Since the Soviets marched in there, I've had double the number of requests to handle," Bremen emigration official Gerhard Storbeck told the magazine.

"At the moment, we have such a storm of people wanting to get out, that it puts everything we've known before in the shade."

Embassies and offices representing Canada, New Zealand and South Africa reported "a leaping climb" in applications for residence permits and "increased interest" in moving out of Europe to live, the magazine said.

Asked about their motives for leaving West Germany, emigrants about to board a flight to Australia at Frankfurt airport cited increased international tension sharpened by energy shortages and the Soviet march into Afghanistan.

"If the sheiks turn off the oil tap, then it will look really gloomy here," one traveler told the magazine.

Meanwhile, in Tehran, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini said in a broadcast today that the Soviet Union "obviously is capable of taking over Afghanistan, but it cannot remain there" and "eventually will be defeated."

Tehran Radio said Khomeini told a group of judges and Mohammed Beheshti, chief justice of the Iranian Supreme Court on Sunday, "No power, neither America nor the U.S.S.R., can impose its will.

Imperial Oil cites need for higher profits

TORONTO (CP) — Higher profits are needed if Imperial Oil Ltd. is to carry out its planned $15-billion investment program for energy-related projects during the 1980s, chairman J. A. Armstrong says in the company's annual report.

He says progress toward energy self-sufficiency will be largely governed by the effort made to increase production, as well as willingness to conserve and to take steps to make more efficient use of existing forms of energy.

As technology improves and oil prices rise, the industry will be able to develop more of the potential of the Alberta oil sands, the report says.

"It will not be the limitations of the industry, but our national resolve as reflected in government policies that will determine the pace of oil-sands production."

The report notes that Imperial was involved in drilling 440 wells last year, double the number drilled in 1978.

Total spending on exploration programs was $434 million, an increase of $254 million from the previous year.

As previously reported, Imperial's net earnings last year were $471 million.

$86M cable offer made

TORONTO (CP) — The Star says Canadian Cablesystems Ltd., Canada's biggest cable-television operator, has promised to spend $10 million on Canadian TV shows and movies over five years and invest $13.5 million in electronic research if allowed to take over Vancouver-based Premier Cable.

The newspaper says that under the Canadian Cablesystems proposal submitted to the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, Vancouver subscribers would benefit from an ultra-modern, 52-channel system.

Cablesystems was to release details today of its proposed $86-million takeover of Premier. The CRTC will examine the proposal at a May 20 hearing in Vancouver, The Star said.

The merger would create a company of 1,040,000 subscribers.

The Star says Cablesystems, headed by Ted Rogers, is pledging to expand Vancouver's 18-channel cable service to 24 channels within two years. Within five years, it hopes to have the cable service up to 35 channels.

As part of the rebuilding of Premier, Cablesystems would equip 30,000 homes for two-way service and put terminals in 10,000 homes to test interactive services, the newspaper says.

The extra two-way service and terminals would mean subscribers could enjoy everything from pay-per-channel and pay-per-program movies to teleshopping that would let a consumer scan goods in a store on the home TV screen.

U.S. investigative reporting slammed as 'trivial'

Mark Starowicz . . . pans 60 Minutes

By JOHN GODDARD

MONTREAL (CP) — One of Canada's most successful radio producers warned a national convention on investigative reporting Sunday "not to import the American perversions of so-called investigative journalism."

Mark Starowicz, the 33-year-old producer of the CBC's newsmagazine show Sunday Morning, was particularly critical of CBS's popular TV program 60 Minutes, calling it "trivial investigative journalism."

"The rude interview often passes for courageous reporting," he said in another reference to the CBS show at a weekend convention that attracted more than 600 media representatives and journalism students from across the country.

Starowicz, whose three-hour package of news, arts reviews and commentaries attracts an estimated 1.2 million listeners a week, also said there is a tendancy among reporters to inject their own opinion into news reports, forgetting that the journalist's function is to gather news and information.

"I worry when I see some of the jingoism in American news," he said in an interview afterward, criticizing one U.S. television station in particular for suggesting during a newscast that viewers wear white arm bands as a sign of support for American hostages in Iran.

"Why couldn't they wait until after the newscast to do that?"

What he called the theatrical aspect of U.S. television news is not widespread in Canada and shouldn't be, he said.

On the subject of the Centre for Investigative Journalism, sponsors of the convention, the radio producer warned those in attendance not to become preoccupied with "surreptitious recordings, brown paper envelopes and going underground."

"We're not cops," said Starowicz, a former newspaper reporter who joined CBC radio in 1970 and later was producer of As It Happens, the program that takes dinnertime listeners to hot news spots via telephone interviews.

The convention featured a series of panel discussions and workshops where accomplished reporters told about the tedium and rewards of pursuing stories of public interest which news organizations pass over in the daily grind, either because of lack of time or inclination.

Walter Stewart, now a senior writer for FP Publications Ltd., told how he got information for his book Paper Juggernaut by sitting in a government office pretending to type notes from documents while actually typing office conversation.

David Burnham, a New York Times reporter, said some of the best stories are obvious ones. He and a photographer once made early-morningrounds documenting how most of New York's policemen went to sleep at 2 a.m., a possible explanation of the city's poor law-enforcement record at the time.

The Centre for Investigative Journalism has been involved in a number of activities aimed at upgrading the general quality of Canadian journalism, said Jock Ferguson, who works for Global television in Toronto and is cochairman of the centre with Jean-Claude LeClerc, a senior reporter at Montreal's Le Devoir.

Three grants were awarded recently to journalists needing financial help to pursue investigative stories, Leclerc said. Details of the grants were not released, but the topics are nuclear security, chemical pollution and the sports industry.

Regional seminars and workshops have been held throughout the year focusing on specific stories of regional importance.

The centre also hopes to start an apprenticeship program in co-operation with Toronto's Ryerson School of Journalism, Ferguson said.

Under the project, students would work with an experienced reporter on a special research assignment. The only hitch is getting The Newspaper Guild — the union of English-speaking journalists — to go along, Ferguson said, adding that he foresees no problems.

Mailmen get $35 a minute for coffee break trade-off

OTTAWA (CP) — The country's 19,500 mailmen wanted an extra 10 minutes coffee break this year and instead have ended up working 10 extra minutes for $350 each.

The agreement, with a price tag of about $6.8 million, is part of a one-year collective agreement reached earlier this month between the government and the Letter Carriers' Union of Canada.

Post office officials said today the government felt it was financially wiser to arrange the agreement than to implement an expensive study to determine what changes would have to be made on each of the thousands of postal routes in the country if 10 minutes of mail delivery time were chopped off each one.

Union president Robert McGarry says letter carriers are content with the arrangement.

They kept their two 10-minute coffee breaks. The extra 10 minutes was aimed at getting them parity with inside postal clerks and sorters who get two 15-minute coffee breaks daily.

Letter carriers now work eight hours and 10 minutes a day under the contract which expires Dec. 31.

'Counterfeit cop' rapist imitated

TORONTO (UPC) — A rapist who masquerades as a police drug squad detective to get inside the homes of his victims has inspired others to use the same ruse to commit lesser crimes, a police spokesman said Sunday.

The counterfeit cop, believed by police to have been responsible for attacks on women dating back to 1976, has raped and indecently assaulted several women in the city in the last few weeks.

"He knocks on the door and flashes a badge at them and says he's a drug officer," said police spokesman Donald Lindsay. "He ties them up and steals what there is to be stolen.

"His tally is around about seven — there have been several in the last few weeks."

Police were worried Sunday that a robbery Saturday of a man in his downtown apartment by two men posing as police might signal the start of petty thieves imitating the imposter's act.

"You do get people imitating," said Lindsay.

The rapist, described as 25 to 30 years old and 5 feet 6 inches tall with medium build and short dark brown hair, "questioned" a 23-year-old woman for over an hour Friday before indecently assaulting her.

Last Monday, he raped and nearly strangled a 21-year-old woman with a telephone cord.

The next night, he forced another woman to commit an indecent act.

Singer jailed

EDMONTON (UPC) — Country and western singer Johnny Paycheck was arrested on a warrant by city police immediatley upon finishing his last show at the Edmonton Coliseum Sunday.

Police said the 42-year-old American country music singer, dubbed the "Ohio Kid," is wanted on a warrant issued by Calgary police in 1976 for failure to appear in family court on an "affiliation and maintenance order."

Don Lytle, who had adopted the name "Johnny Paycheck," was expected to spend the night in jail, and be transferred to face the charge today.

Police waited until after the Sunday afternoon concert before serving him the warrant.

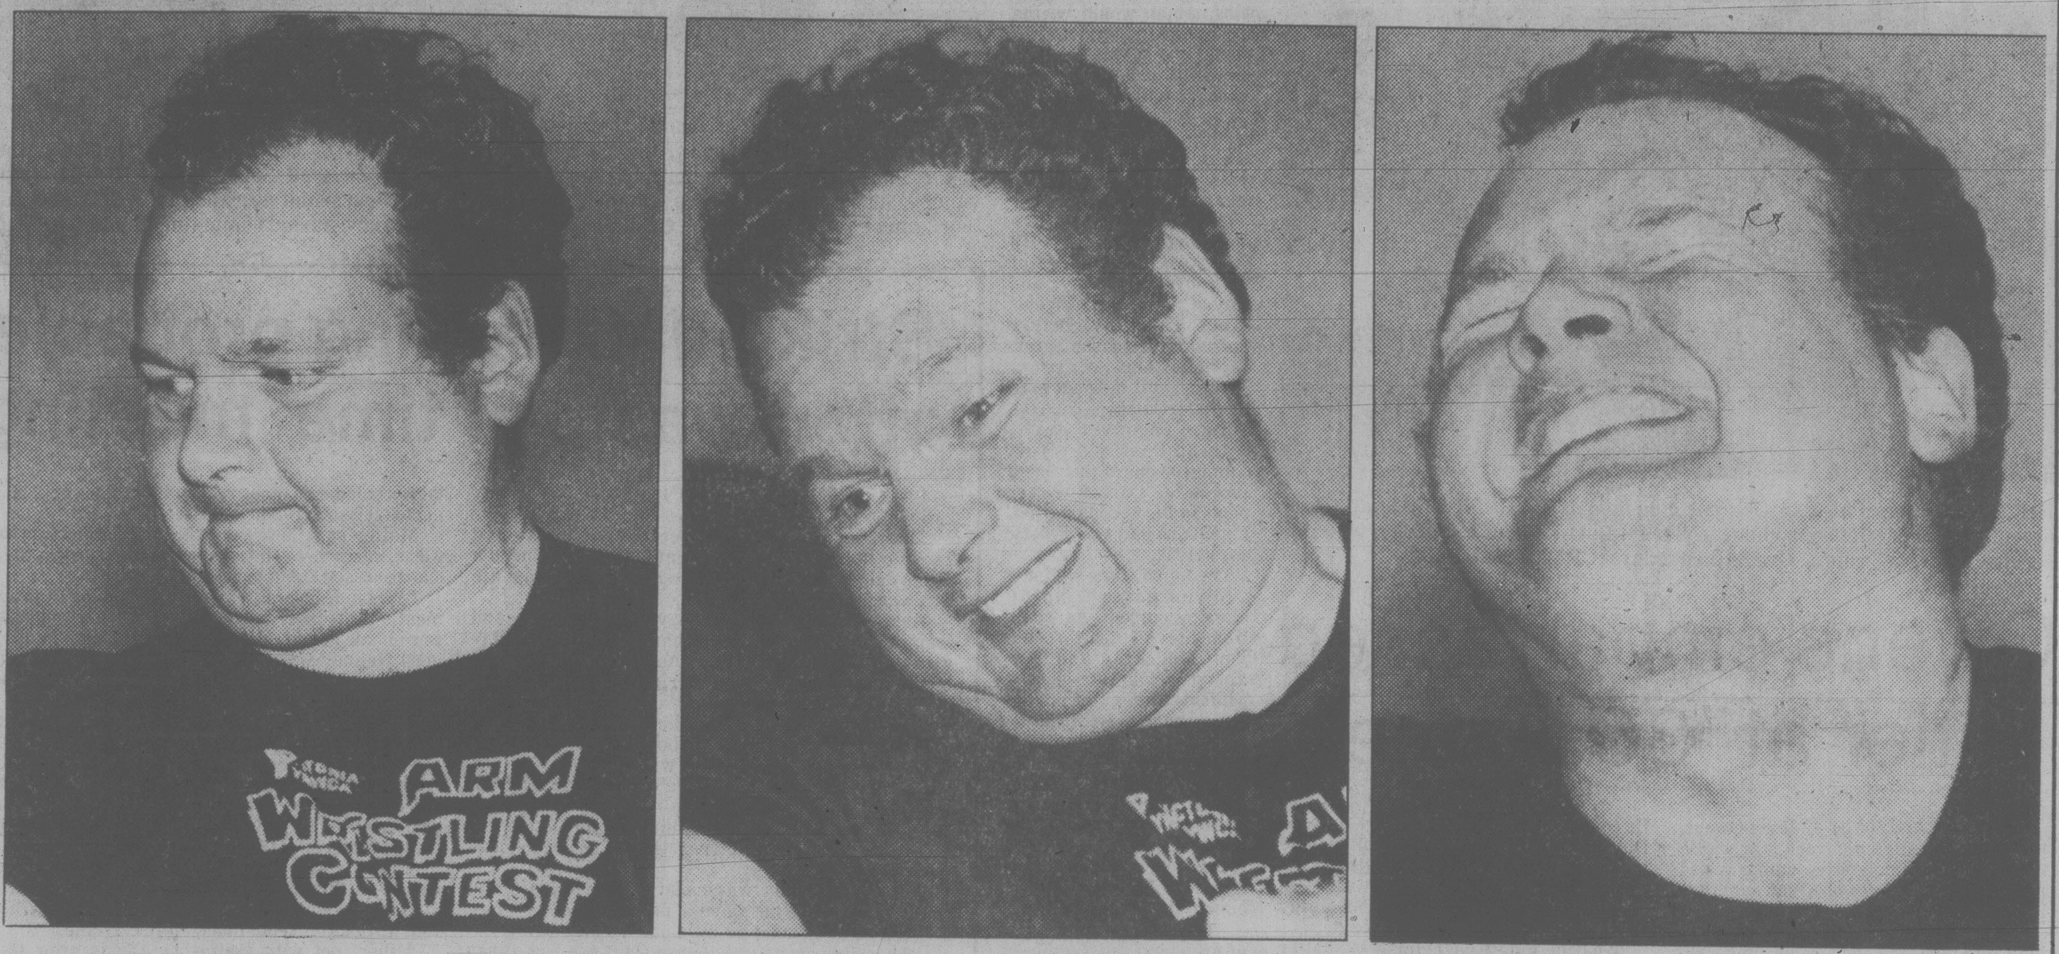
Armed rubbery

That was the result for virtually everyone who took part in Sunday's arm wrestling contest sponsored by VI90 and the Victoria YM-YWCA. The event at the Y attracted 250 to 300 competitors and spectators. The man who had the situation firmly in his grasp after the strain and pain ended was Terrance Gramigna (left), who emerged the over-all winner. The chap keeping a close eye on the armed conflict is John Sipos, who is Mr. Victoria. Ben Powell (below) wasn't as fortunate as Gramigna. He started off with grim determination (left) but simply wasn't able to come to grips with the task at hand despite a valiant last effort (centre). His expression (right) tells it all — the agony of defeat. Ah well, maybe things will go better for Ben next time. As they say, to be forewarned is to be forearmed. (John McKay photos).



In case you're wondering

What's happening these days at the Victoria International Airport? When is the long-awaited expansion going to take place?

Not much and it's perhaps what's not happening that is uppermost with all travellers who use the airport.

One of the few large airports where passengers must pick up their luggage outside, expansion of the terminal facilities has been on the list for a long time along with installation of radar equipment.

Few of the passengers know that the top floor of the airport houses a meteorological office with eight technicians and an officer-in-charge.

Along with a ground and maintenance crew of 15, there are eight people employed in telecommunications and at least 15 traffic controllers.

There are 28 flights a day in and out of the airport while an average of 30 to 40 small planes use it per day.

The largest of the three runways is 7,000 feet.

The 58½ acres on which the airport is located was bought from Stanley and Philip Brethour in the 1940s for a military training base in the Second World War.

It became the Victoria International Airport in 1967.

No strike delays on ferries

Traffic was heavy on the B.C. Ferries Corp. fleet Sunday, but there were no delays caused by additional truck traffic diverted by a strike against CP ferries, a corporation spokesman said.

Meanwhile, federally-mediated discussions resumed today in efforts to end the dispute over a new contract, now into its second week.

Mediators Don Crabbe and Mike Collins have conferred with officials of CP and the Seafarers International Union since being appointed last Wednesday to try to bring the two sides to a settlement.

Crabbe said Sunday no talks were held during the weekend.

Sixty crewmen walked out March 23, halting service by three CP ferries and a fourth under contract to CP from Seaspan International Ltd.

B.C. Ferries is adding an additional late-night sailing for trucks as required, but a spokesman said none had been needed since Friday.

Pool unlocked, tot drowns

A 3½-year-old boy drowned in an apartment swimming pool and a 39-year-old man was killed when his car plunged into Tod Creek in Saanich on the weekend.

Police said the body of Timothy Lawrence Christianson was found by his mother, Mrs. Laura Christiansen, in the pool at the Orangewood Manor apartments, 4026 Quadra, about 11:30 a.m. Sunday.

Efforts were made to revive the boy but he was pronounced dead at Victoria General Hospital more than two hours later.

The door through which the boy gained access to the pool can't be locked because of fire regulations.

Building superintendent Ron Vandervelde said today that although there had been a request for a lock on the sliding patio door leading outside from the pool, the fire marshal ruled against it as the door serves as a fire exit.

The interior door which gives access to the pool from within the building must be opened with a key.

Vandervelde said the youngster had to climb a 2½-foot-high garden wall and go through a small garden to reach the doors.

He said the door had been left open despite repeated requests to tenants to keep it latched.

A spokesman said a car driven by Isherwood, of 6973 Wallace Dr., Central Saanich, left Wallace Drive at a point about 400 metres north of Durrance Lake Road, rolled down a 35-foot embankment and landed upside down in the two-foot-deep waters of Tod Creek.

The vehicle was not found until about noon Saturday.

Saanich police said Isherwood was reported missing by his wife Friday evening.

The car was spotted by farmer Edward Bartlett.

Isherwood is survived by his wife and three children, Geraldine, Thomas and Ross.

He managed the hotel with his brother, Joseph, and was a Shriner and member of the Elks.

City parks budget only $25,000 off the mark

City council's budget committee today approved a $958,770 budget for Victoria's parks department after making only one cut of $25,000 from the allotment for capital improvements to city parks.

Aldermen had few complaints about parks administrator Al Smith's spending plans because he held close to council's general target figure of a 7½ per cent increase.

After the cut, his budget was slightly more that eight per cent above the 1979 parks spending.

Members of the committee even wanted to give him more money for one item, the hanging flower baskets put up on the old cluster lamp standards every spring, which have become an international symbol.

Ald. Bill McElroy said he wnted to see more of them, but Smith said the 650 which the parks department now cares for are the most the present operation can handle.

Any major expansion (Fort Street merchants have asked for flower baskets this year) would overtax the city's facilities, Smith said.

May Day hunt costly hoax?

It's probably a hoax but it's costing taxpayers plenty.

At 8:25 p.m. Sunday the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre at Esquimalt received a May Day message that the 20-foot pleasure craft Seawolf with four people aboard was sinking in the Point Roberts area near Sidney.

A Buffalo aircraft and helicopter from CFB Comox as well as a United States Coast Guard helicopter were despatched. Two boats, manned by Provincial Emergency Program volunteers, also searched the area.

Nothing was found but the search continued today.

Pass system may replace free buses

The city-subsidized downtown Freewheeler bus zone ended today but a pass system likely will replace the scheme later this year if the Capital Regional District gives approval.

Mayor Bill Tindall said the city did not extend its half-share of the funding for the $42,000 six-month demonstration program, sponsored jointly by Victoria and the Urban Transit Authority.

The last free ride in the 22-square-block area of downtown was at 3 p.m. today.

The program was designed to encourage people to use transit in the congested downtown core, but the mayor said operational problems led to difficulties.

"While rider response was generally favorable, the service created operating problems and passenger confusion that have negated the value of the service," the mayor said in a statement.

"The main area of confusion centred around the fact that while persons could ride around the downtown area for free, they had to pay if they continued on the bus beyond the fare-free zone."

The mayor said the UTA is preparing a plan that would involve the sale of several types of passes, including a daily pass for probably twice the regular 50-cent fare, a weekly pass for commuters, and possibly also an annual pass.

The fourth type would be a corporate pass to be sold in bulk to employers and businesses.

Thanks to Ivan, Canucks still alive

Times News Services

A liberal dose of speed on the wings was all Ivan Boldirev needed Sunday night to get his game into high gear.

The veteran centre made good use of new wingers Curt Fraser and Gary Lupul as he scored three times and assisted on the other two Vancouver goals as the Canucks kept their faint playoff hopes alive with a 5-3 win over Minnesota North Stars in a National Hockey League game.

"I seem to need some speed on the wings to open things up for me," said Boldirev, now with 29 goals on the season. "I guess the coach will leave us together for the next game."

The win was the first for the Canucks at the Pacific Coliseum since March 4 and came in the sixth game of a crucial eight-game home stand. Vancouver now has 64 points — the same as 16th-place Washington Capitals — although Washington has two more wins, which would be the tie-breaking criterion should the teams end the 80-game schedule with equal point totals.

The four NHL division winners make the playoffs, along with the next 12 teams on a points basis, regardless of division.

The Canucks play Edmonton Oilers, in 15th place two points ahead of Vancouver, Tuesday, and play host to Los Angeles Kings Thursday, before finishing the season Saturday at Los Angeles.

Lupul and defenceman Kevin McCarthy scored the other Vancouver goals, with McCarthy's effort coming on one of the rarely successful Canuck power plays in the second period. Lupul also had two assists, as did Fraser.

The North Stars, who saw a seven-game winning streak snapped, got goals from Steve Payne, rookie Tom McCarthy and Tim Young. Minnesota played without three injured defencemen — Brad Maxwell, Gary Sargent and Paul Shmyr.

Meawnhile, Philadelphia Flyers assured themselves of the home-ice advantage in all Stanley Cup playoff rounds when they defeated Atlanta Flames 4-2 to clinch the over-all title.

"There's certainly a lot of pride and satisfaction in winning it," said coach Pat Quinn after the Flyers had finished with the highest points total for the first time in their 13 years in the NHL. "We had expected to be in the race, but we certainly didn't expect to be first over-all." Quinn said.

It was the 47th win of the season against 11 losses and 19 ties for the Flyers, giving them 113 points — five shy of the 1975-76 Philadelphia team record of 118.

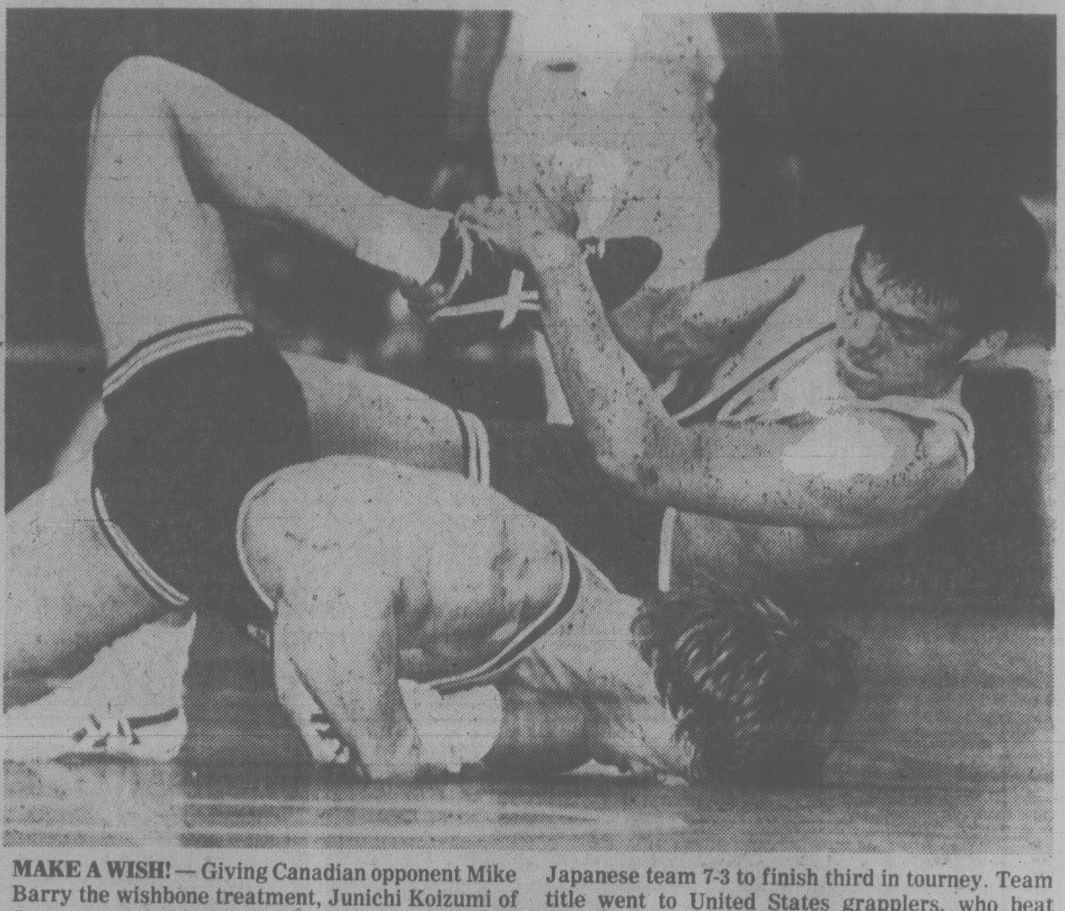
Second place in the over-all standings remains in doubt. Montreal Canadiens and Buffalo Sabres, tied in the runner-up slot before Sunday's showdown in Buffalo, battled to a 1-1 draw and each team now has 102 points. Boston Bruins increased their total to 101 with a 3-1 win over Winnipeg Jets.

Elsewhere, New York Islanders outscored Quebec Nordiques 9-6, Pittsburgh Penguins blanked Washington Capitals 4-0 and Chicago Black Hawks were held to a 2-2 tie by Colorado Rockies.

On Saturday, Wayne Gretzky counted six points to move into a tie with Marcel Dionne for the league scoring leadership as Edmonton Oilers bombed Toronto Maple Leafs 8-5. Detroit Red Wings downed Quebec 9-7, Philadelphia tied Washington 3-3, New York Rangers edged St. Louis Blues 4-3 and Hartford Whalers and Los Angeles Kings tied 2-2.



MAKE A WISH! — Giving Canadian opponent Mike Barry the wishbone treatment, Junichi Koizumi of Japan appears in command here, but Barry posted victory Sunday in World Cup amateur wrestling tournament at Toledo, Ohio. Canadians defeated Japanese team 7-3 to finish third in tourney. Team title went to United States grapplers, who beat heavily-favored Soviet Union. It was first time American senior wrestlers have defeated Russians since they started competing in 1959. (AP photo)

Strike-date setting probable after 'waste of time' meeting

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Strike two or play ball?

That question will almost certainly be answered Tuesday in Dallas, but a bet on at least the setting of a strike date by major league baseball players is as safe as a wager on Spectacular Bid.

Representatives of the players association and team owners met for more than nine hours Sunday with Ken Moffett, deputy director of the U.S. Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

"Nothing happened," remarked the union's executive director, Marvin Miller, when the sides parted.

The association's executive board meets Tuesday to determine when and if a strike will be called.

"This was a complete waste of time," Miller said of Sunday's meeting with the owners. "There isn't the slightest basis for their calling the mediation service with no intention of negotiating or listening to our viewpoint.

"This entire day was spent on the owners' demands, nothing on the players' proposal."

Miller was asked if he anticipated a long strike.

"I certainly don't anticipate a short one, not if they have the strike insurance I keep hearing about," he said. "I think they (the owners) are doing everything possible to provoke a strike. It's as clear as can be. They're acting like four-year-olds."

Miller said there was no doubt in his mind that the owners were trying to break the union. He said there could be no other reason that they would be willing to take such financial losses."

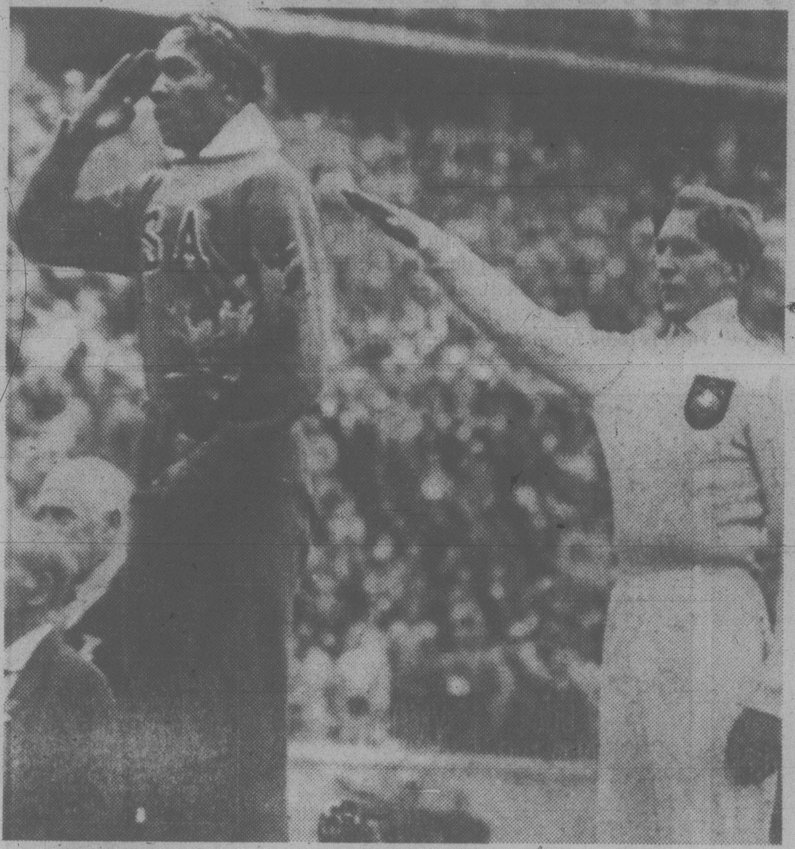
Moffett said there would be another meeting but he wasn't sure when. The compensation issue was the only one discussed Sunday, he said.

"We made no progress as far as coming to an agreement on this issue is concerned. A lot of suggestions were made in both private caucuses and in joint meetings. Neither side made any concessions. It's going to take a while; there's about a hundred issues and we only talked about one."

Moffett referred to a proposal by the owners to adjust the amount of compensation a team receives after losing a free agent. The owners proposed that a team signing a highly-sought free agent be required to give up a player, rather than an amateur draft choice, in return. The free agent's new team could protect only 15 of its players in that process.

The only other strike in major league history occurred in 1972. It lasted 13 days, including the first nine days of what became a shortened season. The current difficulties seem much more extreme.

Miller met with California Angels prior to Sunday's meeting with the owners and mediator. It was the 26th and final team he had discussed the situation with, and the Angels voted 30-0 for authorizing a strike on or after Tuesday. That made the total vote 967-1. A source said the lone dissenter was Jerry Terrell of Kansas City Royals.



RECEIVING one of his four Olympic gold medals in 1936 for long jump, Jesse Owens stands on victory podium in Berlin. Lutz Long of Germany, who was second, gives Nazi salute. Owens died today. (CP Laserphoto).

Owens embarrassed Hitler at '36 Games

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Jesse Owens, the black 1936 Olympic track star whose four gold medal victories embarrassed Adolf Hitler's theories of Aryan superiority, died today at a Tucson hospital.

Owens, who had been suffering from a lung infection and inoperable lung cancer.

He was 66.

His wife Ruth was at his side.

Owens first entered hospital Dec. 12 in Chicago where his illness was diagnosed as adenocarcinoma, a cancer doctors said usually is associated with heavy cigarette smoking. Doctors said Owens had smoked about a pack of cigarettes a day for 35 years.

Owens was 22 when his record-setting performance in Berlin shattered German leader Adolf Hitler's hopes for Aryan supremacy at the Games.

Owens had recently opposed President Carter's call for boycotting the Moscow Olympics, saying politics have no place in the Games.

Such was the magnitude of Owens's Olympic feat in the 1936 Berlin Games that it became a standard, a yardstick by which other accomplishments were measured.

When swimmer Mark Spitz won an extraordinary seven gold medals in the 1976 Summer Games in Munich, it was compared to Owens's record. And when Eric Heiden swept five gold medals in speed skating events at the 1980 Winter Games in Lake Placid, N.Y., again it was Owens's name that surfaced for comparison.

Perhaps the best indication of his greatness, though, was that it took four decades before the last of his 11 world records in track and field vanished from the record books.

"I looked upon them as a part of history," he said in 1975, shortly after his name disappeared from the list of recordholders. "I was proud to be involved in that history-making process, but I have nothing but admiration for the kids coming along today."

Unlike today's Olympians who, with the help of television and the mass media, have the opportunity to become instant superstars, Owens found that some doors did not open after his triumph.

He did not return from his smashing Olympic success to star in the movies as Johnny Weissmuller and Sonja Henie did. He could not star in another sport, as Babe Didrikson did on the golf links, or become involved in politics, as Bob Mathias and Rafer Johnson did. He could not turn professional, as Dick Button, Dorothy Hamill and other figure skaters did.

What he did, after helping to shatter Hitler's myth of Aryan superiority, was to return to the United States and become a sort of side-show attraction. He raced against horses and, later, toured with basketball's Harlem Globetrotters, running exhibition races as a halftime attraction.

"Sure, it bothered me," he once said.

"But you have to remember there is a vast difference between my time and today's time.

"Young blacks today are living in a world that is changing, a world in which a man with ability and who is prepared can work and succeed at what he is doing."

In the 1930s, an era of fierce nationalism, few things united the United States against Nazism as dramatically as Hitler's so-called snub of Owens after Jesse had captured gold medals by winning the 100- and 200-metre dashes and the long jump and by anchoring the victorious American 400-metre relay team.

In fact, there was no snub, as such. After the opening day of competition, the winners were escorted to the German dictator's box to be congratulated. Then the president of the International Olympic Committee, Count Henri de Baillet-Latour of Belgium, told Hitler he had no business congratulating the competitors. From then on, Hitler left the stadium each day without congratulating anyone.

"When I came back, after all the stories about Hitler and his snub, I came back to my native country and I couldn't ride in the front of the bus," he said.

"I had to go to the back door. I couldn't live where I wanted . . . I wasn't invited up to shake hands with Hitler — but I wasn't invited to the White House to shake hands with the President, either.

Ultimately, Owens became a successful businessman, a national spokesman for the American Olympic movement and the U.S. state department's Ambassador to Sports.

And 40 years after President Franklin Roosevelt failed to invite him to the White House, then-president Gerald Ford honored Owens by presenting him with the Presidential Medal of Freedom at the White House on Aug. 5, 1976.

It should have been easier in well-earned Cougar win

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Victoria Cougars' first victory in the Western Hockey League playoffs was hardly a certainty for 59 minutes, 34 seconds Saturday night at Memorial Arena. Finally, an open-net goal by winger Bob Jansch with 26 seconds remaining brought on the coziness of sureness.

It was Victoria 3, Portland Winter Hawks 1.

On another night, certainty might have been evident after 40 minutes.

Full of spirit and solving a technical problem that allowed Portland to exert a winning edge in their last three meetings, the Cougars earned full marks for their triumph before 4,414 fans.

They out-shot the Hawks 47-23 and, in the opinion of their coach, Jack Shupe, "played their best game in weeks."

Jansch's goal was the easiest of Victoria's three. The Cougars worked harder to get their first two — by Torrie Robertson and Barry Pederson. As it turned out, the two were enough to overcome Brian Shaw's goal, on a power play, that got Portland on top, 1-0, early.

It should have been easier.

Portland netminder Darrell May was an important stumbling block. He turned away 44 of the shots fired his way and helped delay the certainty that, on this night, should have come to the Cougars earlier.

When you play as well as the Cougars did Saturday, the goal total should be greater. The total generally is padded with a fair share of "easy" goals, the kind that come from deflections and long screened shots or odd bounces.

While May was the obvious reason, a more subtle factor might be Victoria's shooting from the points covered by defencemen. It wasn't great. Cougar point men got away only 13 of 70 Victoria shots (47 on goal, 23 off the mark).

Captain Mark Robinson accounted for six of them (two on, four off the mark). Bob McGill was 2-1, Tony Feltrin and Len Dawes both 1-1, and Robert Jacobson failed to fire any from the point.

Cougar forwards do not use their point men to full advatage as, say, Portland uses David Babych. Consequently, Victoria forwards have to work harder for goals.

Fortunately, for Victoria's cause, it didn't matter and the point shooting was about the only major flaw in Cougars' game.

Victoria was provided solid netminding by rookie Grant Fuhr, one of the stars of the night, but also instrumental in the cause was the Cougar breakout from its defensive zone.

In past games with Portland and Seattle Breakers, the rivals sent two forecheckers at Victoria puckcarriers. It was a system that caused Victoria some problems but the Cougars, with the defencemen playing the puck to centre as well as to the wingers, had only a few problems with their breakout pattern Saturday.

Now 1-0 in the Western Division's double round-robin semi-final, the Cougars bid for their second victory tonight when Seattle (1-1) visits Memorial Arena. Portland (now 1-2) visits Seattle on Tuesday.

In the Eastern Division, the favored Regina Pats swept Lethbridge Broncos aside in four straight but the other best-of-seven series remain tossups.

Billings Bighorns rebounded from a 3-2 loss Saturday to edge Medicine Hat Tigers 4-3 Sunday and tie the series 2-2. Brandon Wheat Kings, beaten 2-1 Saturday, went back into the driver's seat, and a 3-2 series advantage, by defeating Calgary Wranglers 8-2 Sunday.

Flyers take title

CRANBROOK (CP) — Spokane Flyers won the Western International Hockey League championship Saturday night with a 6-1 victory over Cranbrook Royals, taking the best-of-seven final series 4-2.

Four world boxing titles at stake

Four world boxing titles are on the line tonight in three United States cities, including heavyweight fights featuring rival champions Larry Holmes and John Tate.

Holmes risks his World Boxing Council belt to challenger Leroy Jones in Las Vegas, Nev., while Tate, champion of the World Boxing Association, meets Mike Weaver in Knoxville.

The other matches pit welterweights Sugar Ray Leonard and David Green in Landover, Md., and light-heavyweights Marvin Johnson and Eddie Gregory, also in Knoxville.

In Las Vegas, Holmes defends his championship for the sixth time and, once again, he's fighting in the shadow of Muhammad Ali.

Promoter Bob Arum claims the winner of the Tate-Weaver fight will defend against Ali in a $10-million bout at the New Orleans Superdome in late June. But Don King, another promoter, called Holmes the real heavyweight champion and Tate "a figment of Bob Arum's imagination" and said Sunday that no Ali fight was set and that if the retired three-time champion does come back, it should be against Holmes.

Sports tonight

Live hockey and televised boxing share the sports spotlight tonight.

Victoria Cougars clash with Seattle Breakers in a Western Division round-robin playoff game in the Western Hockey League at 8 in Memorial Arena.

On Channels 4 and 8, four world title fights are scheduled to begin at 5. Scheduled are the WBC heavyweight battle between Larry Holmes and Leroy Jones, the WBC welterweight fight between Sugar Ray Leonard and David Green, the WBA heavyweight struggle between John Tate and Mike Weaver and the WBA light-heavyweight bout between Marvin Johnson and Eddie Gregory.

Boucher, Turnbull win North American titles

World champion Gaetan Boucher of Ste. Foy, Que., and Canadian champion Cathy Turnbull of Regina — who finished third in the world — emerged with the senior over-all titles as the North American indoor speedskating championships wrapped up Sunday at Memorial Arena.

Boucher picked up the men's crown by winning the 400 and 1,500-metre events Sunday after winning the 800 and finishing third after a fall in the 1,000 on Saturday.

Turnbull swept all four women's races at the same distances.

Randy Ljuden of Fort St. John, B.C., won the junior boys' crown and Maryse Perreault of Quebec collected the corresponding girls' title.

Derrick Auch of Manitoba won midget boys' laurels and Maura D'Andrea of New York prevented a complete Canadian sweep by taking midget girls' honors.

The only Victoria skaters to earn medals were Greg Thormoe of the Esquimalt club, which staged the event, and Leslie Davidson. Thormoe took a bronze medal for finishing third in the juvenile boys' 400 metre race Saturday and Davidson also collected a bronze medal in the junior girls' 1,000 metres Sunday. However the Esquimalt club's main hopes — meet director Jim Shields' son and daughter David and Brenda Shields and Rod Phillips — all finished out of the medals.

It's two big ones in row for Tracy over Martina

By Canadian Press

Tracy Austin posted her second victory over archrival Martina Navratilova within eight days, while Bjorn Borg and John McEnroe, the two big names on the men's tour, won separate European tournaments in weekend tennis action.

"I don't want to talk about No. 1 yet, it's too early," said Austin after beating Navratilova 7-5, 6-2 Sunday in the final of a $200,000 tournament in Carlsbad, Calif., the first outdoor event of 1980 for women players. "She's beaten me twice and I've beaten her twice, but I've beaten her in bigger tournaments."

Austin, 17, scored a straight set victory over Navratilova in New York last Sunday in the winter circuit championship. The victories were worth $100,000 apiece to the schoolgirl from Rolling Hills, Calif.

In Nice, France, Borg clobbered Manuel Orantes of Spain 6-2, 6-0, 6-1 to win the $50,000 Nice Open.

McEnroe also encountered little difficulty winning the World Championship Tennis tournament in Milan, Italy, beating Vijay Amritraj 6-1, 6-4 in Sunday's final for a first prize of $35,000.

Top-seeded Wojtek Fibak of Poland beat Bruce Manson 7-6, 6-3 to win the $75,000 Dayton Classic.

Piquet all the way

Times News Services

Nelson Piquet says he knew he had the best car in Sunday's Long Beach Grand Prix.

The Brazilian, 27, who drove his sleek Brabham BT49 to his first Formula One victory, started at the front of the 24-car field and never trailed in the California event. That was quite a feat, considering the attrition rate due to collisions and mechanical problems that left just 10 cars running at the end of the 162.610-mile race.

"Last year, I was third here," Piquet said. "Anything can happen, but if you don't break down, you win. I knew if I got a good start, I am okay because my car is much better than the others."

Defending Long Beach champion Gilles Villeneuve of Berthierville, Que., was 15th. His Ferrari went out on the 46th lap after the driveshaft broke on the winding 2.02-mile course.

Veteran Swiss driver Clay Regazzoni was seriously injured in a freak accident when his Ensign lost its brakes as it zoomed down the longest straightaway. The car missed one of the two hairpin turns on the circuit, roared down a safety road, struck a parked racer — crashed earlier by Ricardo Zunio of Argentina — and slammed through a tire barrier into a concrete retaining wall.

Regazzoni, 40, underwent surgery for a spinal injury. He also had a bruised forehead, stomach pains and a broken right leg.

He was listed in serious but stable condition.

Piquet beat Riccardo Patrese of Italy by 49.28 seconds.

Former world champion Emerson Fittipaldi of Brazil was third, followed by John Watson of Ireland, defending world champion Jody Scheckter of South Africa and Jochen Mass of West Germany. Alan Jones of Australia tangled with Bruno Giacomelli of Italy on the 47th lap, was forced out and placed 14th.

In Bristol, Tenn., Dale Earnhardt of Kannapolis, N.C., continued his bid for the Grand National stock car point title by winning his second race in a row, capturing the Southeastern 500 at Bristol Raceway.

It was the third Grand National victory this season for Earnhardt, the National Association for Stock Auto Racing rookie of the year in 1979.

Last year's NASCAR point runner-up, Darrell Waltrip of Franklin, Tenn., was second after starting on the outside pole and Bobby Allison of Hueytown, Ala., was third in a Ford. Benny Parsons of Ellerbe, N.C., finished fourth and pole-winner Cale Yarborough of Timmonsville, S.C., was fifth.

Two new Lions

VANCOUVER (CP) — Import defensive back Don Gordon of Texas and import wide receiver Marcus Starling of Tennessee have signed 1980 Canadian Football League contracts with British Columbia Lions.

Unranked newcomer trips Dunlop in final

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — Douglas Burke of Toronto was an upset winner Sunday, downing second-seeded Laird Dunlop of Victoria 7-5, 6-4 to win the boys' singles title at the Canadian indoor junior tennis championships.

Burke, 16, who was not ranked nationally last year because he had just emigrated from Jamaica, had beaten John Wilder of Markham, Ont., the fourth seed, 6-3, 6-0 in semi-final play Saturday. Dunlop, a native of Ottawa who moved to Victoria about eight months ago, reached the final by defeating third-seeded Simon Bartram of Ontario 6-3, 6-4.

Jill Hetherington of Brampton won the girls' crown, defeating second-seeded Diane Blondeau of Quebec City 4-6, 7-6, 7-5 after surprising No. 1 seed Fatima Ravat of Mississauga 6-3, 2-6, 7-6. Blondeau had won her semi-final 5-7, 6-3, 6-2 over Carole Bertrand of Portland, Ore.

Bertram and Wilder dumped Mississauga's Robert Benneyworth and Peter Straub 6-4, 6-1 in a doubles final. Hetherington and Ravat won the girls' doubles, defeating Blondeau and Karen Barbiero of Toronto, 3-6, 6-4, 7-6.

Surf upsets Whitecaps

By The Canadian Press

A goal by Steve Moyers against the run of play with less than six minutes remaining gave California Surf a 2-1 decision over defending champion Vancouver Whitecaps in the North American Soccer League opener Saturday night for both sides.

Moyers headed a ball from Laurie Abrahams about 15 yards in front of the Vancouver net and it bounced over the head of confused goalkeeper David Harvey to break a 1-1 tie.

The loss marked the fifth straight year the Whitecaps have lost their home opener, this time before an Empire Stadium crowd of 25,711.

Abrahams also scored the other California goal in the opening half and Willie Johnston replied for Vancouver a minute later.

Elsewhere on opening night, Tampa Bay Rowdies edged Washington Diplomats 3-2; Dallas Tornado blanked Atlanta Chiefs 2-0; Tulsa Roughnecks shut out Houston Hurricane 1-0; Memphis Rogues shaded Fort Lauderdale Strikers 2-1, and Seattle Sounders nipped Detroit Express 1-0. There were no games Sunday.

Goalkeeper Mike Mahoney of the Surf played a brilliant game, especially in the second half when the Whitecaps had most of the play until Moyers' surprise goal.

Harvey, replacing popular Phil Parkes who was traded to Chicago Sting last winter, had little work in the Vancouver net, saving just three shots. Mahoney stopped six 'Cap shots.

Peter Baralic scored on Tampa Bay's sixth shot in a shootout to decide their victory over Washington. The Rowdies made four shots and missed two in the shootout, while Washington scored only three.

Centre-forward Klaus Topmoller scored on a penalty kick in the 68th minute and, two minutes later, winger Omar Gomez burst past the Atlanta defence, took a pass from Topmoller, and scored the insurance goal for Dallas.

Tulsa's Alan Woodward stole the ball and kicked a perfect pass across field to Billy Caskey, who headed it into the net for the only goal and hand Houston its first loss at home after 15 straight victories in the Astrodome last season.

Player-coach Charlie Cooke blasted a kick past goalkeeper Arnie Mausser in a shootout to give Memphis its home-field win in a game played in a steady rain.

Folk rink returns world curling title

Rick Folk and his rink from Saskatoon put Canada at the head of the class with a perfect record in the 13th Air Canada Silver Broom.

"It's just a fantastic feeling right now," said Folk, 30, who shaded defending champion Kristian Soerum of Norway 7-6 in Sunday's final game before 7,580 spectators in the Coliseum.

Teammates Ron Mills and brothers Tom and Jim Wilson echoed Folk's statement as the Saskatchewan foursome won the first world men's title for Canada since 1972.

"The pressure was on all week to win it for Canada," said Folk. "We knew we could do it if we curled like we can. Thank God, we stayed on it all week."

It was Canada's second world curling title in less than a month — Regina's Marj Mitchell having won the women's championship in Perth, Scotland.

"We lost to the best team here, so we don't feel bad about that," said Soerum, who had defeated Canadian opponents in the 1979 and 1978 semi-finals.

"We wanted to stay equal with them for five or six ends and I'm happy we did that. I thought that if we stayed close, Folk would get nervous."

Folk, a real estate salesman and one of Saskatchewan's leading amateur golfers besides skip of the new world champions, said team effort paid off.

"We play as a team and we win as a team and I'm more than happy to come through for the guys."

Folk, who finished second on two occasions in the Canadian championship before winning the title in Calgary this year, directed his rink to a 9-0 record in round-robin play. That eliminated the fourth and final playoff position, leaving Norway and Jurg Tanner of Switzerland as the top two teams behind Canada.

Soerum, a 5-4 winner over Peter Attinger of Switzerland in the 1979 final, eliminated Tanner 9-6 Saturday to advance against Folk.

"I would credit our consistency and our aggressiveness," said Folk. "Every time we had last rock, we were looking for two. The team played good and consistent all week."

Orest Meleschuk of Winnipeg won Canada's last world men's title in 1972 in an eight-country championship. During the last seven years, the U.S. won three times, Sweden twice and Switzerland and Norway once each.

Collins tops jumping event

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Steve Collins, 16, of Thunder Bay, Ont., on Sunday won the international ski flying competition at Harrachov, ahead of Austria's world ski flying champion Armon Kogler and Finland's Tom Levorstad.

Bad weather conditions — an icy rain and afterwards heavy snowfalls — allowed only one flight, not enough to be taken into consideration for the over-all results. The four best jumps of Friday and Saturday were used to determine the final results.

Collins even in the adverse weather condition, recorded the longest distance Sunday with a leap of 169 metres.

Jets acquire Swedish star

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Jets have 204-pound centre signed Anders Steen, the leading point scorer in Sweden's Elite Division, to a National Hockey League contract.

Playing for Sweden's Farjestad Club, the 24-year-old Steen scored 30 goals and 17 assists in 36 games this season.

Olympics trip T-Birds

VANCOUVER (CP) — Britisk Columbia Olympics defeated the University of B.C. Thunderbirds Saturday to win the men's title in the provincial AA volleyball championship tournament.

Soccer meeting slated to solve playoff puzzle

A league executive meeting tonight will settle the fourth and final playoff berth following an extremely tight finish to the regular season in the Vancouver Island Soccer League's first division.

Gorge edged Nanaimo 2-1 at the Hub City in the only match Sunday to create a three-way deadlock with University of Victoria Vikings and Meston's Auto Body for third place.

Victoria West collected league laurels by the thinnest of margins after playing Powell River Villas to a 1-1 deadlock Saturday on the Mainland while Victoria Athletics dropped Gorge 4-0 at Heywood Avenue Park.

The results left defending-champion Wests in a tie for first with Athletics but the former club earned the title on the basis of a better record in games between the clubs. Vic West won one game 2-1 and the two clubs battled to a 3-3 deadlock in the other match.

Vikings were given third place on a similar basis, but records of the other third-place clubs produced a playoff-berth puzzle that league officials intend to solve tonight.

Gorge and Meston's each scored a 1-0 victory in the two league matchups between the teams.

Oak Bay, which finished in a points tie with Powell River but lost both games to the Villas, and Castaways will be relegated to the second division.

Playoff and Jackson Cup dates will also be decided at the meeting tonight.

Howie Kirk scored the equallizer for Gorge 14 minutes into the second half on a cross from Mike Collis and then produced the winner on a chip shot from 12 yards out with one minute remaining.

In Powell River, Bobby Duncan opened scoring for Wests at 72 minutes and Lawrence Harry connected with the tying goal for Villas nine minutes later.

In the other Saturday tussle, Dave McCaig scored three goals to lead the A's and push his season count to 17, one behind league champion Don Attig of Nanaimo. Pat Smith scored the other goal for Athletics.

Birds bag rugby cup despite Tide triumph

Crimson Tide, the Vancouver Island Rugby Union representative side, won the match but lost the overall battle in McKechnie Cup competition on Saturday.

Tide managed to demolish Fraser Valley 24-12 at Royal Athletic Park after getting away to a slow start, but the University of British Columbia Thunderbirds came up with a 26-9 win over Vancouver Reps at Brockton Oval in Vancouver to retain the historic trophy that is emblematic of provincial inter-city rugby supremacy.

Thunderbirds finished the four-team, round-robin competition with a 3-0 record, Tide was second at 2-1, Vancouver was 1-2 and Fraser Valley was beaten in all three starts.

Tide needed a rally to pull off the victory after Fraser Valley rambled to a 12-3 lead at halftime and was still ahead 12-9 with 15 minutes remaining.

K.C. Walt of James Bay crashed over the line for the go-ahead try and clubmate Murray Allen kicked the conversion. Ed Polson went over for another try about five minutes later and Allen, who had booted three penalty goals, added anither conversion.

Crimson Tide defeated Vancouver 3-0 but lost 17-9 to the Thunderbirds in earlier Cup matches.

By The Associated Press

Washington Bullets did what they had to do to make the playoffs for the 12th consecutive season, but guard Kevin Grevey wasn't pouring any champagne.

"It's a fluke for us to be in the playoffs," conceded Grevey, who scored 23 points to lead the Bullets to a 93-87 victory over New Jersey Nets on Sunday, the final day of the National Basketball Association's regular season.

"We shouldn't be here, not the way we played this season," added Grevey. "This certainly salvaged a disappointing season."

Beating the Nets gave the Bullets a 39-43 record, the same as New York Knicks, but Washington got the final Eastern Conference playoff berth by virtue of a better record against conference foes.

"There's no relief over winning this game," said forward Elvin Hayes. "We're not at strong as we'd like to be, but we'll strike some fear in a few hearts."

The playoffs begin Wednesday night with the opening games of four best-of-three series. Washington is at Philadelphia and San Antonio at Houston in the Eastern Conference and Portland at Seattle and Kansas City at Phoenix in the West.

Seattle's 135-104 victory over Portland on Sunday night gave the SuperSonics the third-best record in the conference, 56-26, and matched them against the same Trail Blazers in the first round. Phoenix finished one game behind the Sonics and will meet Kansas City Kings in the opening round.

Los Angeles Lakers will play the winner of Phoenix-Kansas City and Milwaukee Bucks will oppose the winner of Seattle-Portland in the best-of-seven conference semi-finals.

Houston clinched its home-court advantage by beating Indiana 121-106. San Antonio also won, 144-124 over Detroit, to tie the Rockets at 41-41, but Houston got the edge because of a better conference record.

In other Sunday action, Los Angeles Lakers edged Golden State Warriors 95-93, Milwaukee Bucks topped Utah Jazz 107-91, Philadelphia 76ers defeated Boston Celtics 116-110, Atlanta Hawks beat Cleveland Cavaliers 111-102 and Kansas City Kings downed Chicago Bulls 114-110.

In one Saturday game, Chicago tripped Utah 111-106.

Washington led 74-59 late in the third quarter before former Bullet Roger Phegley led a 22-8 spurt as New Jersey closed to within 82-81 with five minutes remaining.

But Grevey hit a pair of jumpers, one from three-point range, to enable the Bullets to stay in front.

"We start a new season Wednesday night," said Washington coach Dick Motta, "and I hope the players realize they have a few things to prove. A month ago it looked bleak for us. But with all the injuries we've had, the courage of this team can't be questioned. Philadelphia will not be able to have a lark."

Gus Williams scored 23 points and all 10 Seattle players hit double figures as the defending champion Sonics beat Portland in their playoff preview. The 31-point margin was Seattle's largest of the season and the win was the Sonics' fifth in six game against their Pacific Northwest rival.

Larry Kenon poured in a career-high 51 points and George Gervin wrapped up his third straight scoring title.

Jim Chones took a pass from Earvin Johnson and stuffed in the shot with two seconds remaining to give Los Angeles a one-point lead. He was also fouled on the play and sank the free throw for the final margin as the Lakers won their fifth in a row.

Parris a standout in Realtors victory

KAMLOOPS — Sparked by a standout performance from Robbie Parris, who was selected as the tournament's most-valuable-player, Henderson Realty of Victoria captured the British Columbia senior "B" men's basketball championship here Sunday.

On Saturday, Hendersons walloped Fraser Valley 133-96 and topped Burnaby Bucks, 111-86.

Parris sank 24 points in the final, fired 25 against Fraser Valley and counted 32 against Burnaby.

Chris Trumpy added 18 in the final and was chosen to the all-star team along with clubmates Jim Duddridge and Bob Burrows.

DataTech and Cuckoo Clock, two other Victoria clubs, placed fourth and seventh, respectively.

Ace of Aderlecht going to Cosmos

BRUSSELS (AP) — Froncois van der Elst, star forward with SC Aderlecht of Belgian soccer's First Division, is expected to join New York Cosmos of the North American Soccer League in a few days.

A spokesman for Anderlecht says it will be under a three-year deal, in which the Belgian team will receive $1 million.

Live mikes not for gabby pros

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — With four players within a single shot of each other going into today's rain-delayed final round of the $300,000 Heritage Classic golf tournament, a variety of possibilities exist.

One that does not exist, however, is that John Mahaffey will be wearing a live television microphone.

"That will not happen," Mahaffey said Sunday after a double bogey by Jerry Pate put Mahaffey and Doug Tewell in a tie for the lead in the weather-plagued, twice-delayed event. Pate and Johnny Miller were a single shot back.

"I say too many things under my breath for me to be wearing a mike," Mahaffey said.

Tom Kite, Bruce Lietzke and Lanny Wadkins were wearing live mikes Saturday when they said some things on television which, Kite admitted, would have been better left unsaid.

The remarks — with Kite, Lietzke and Wadkins criticizing John Schroeder as a slow player — stirred up a controversy.

"Obviously, I'm very upset," Schroeder said. "It really shocked me. It shows no class, the poorest kind of judgment."

Kite said he knew he was wired for sound but did not expect the remarks to be relayed on national TV.

"We were standing around waiting to hit. You don't expect to be on camera when you're just standing around," he said. "Obviously, this sort of thing doesn't belong on national television or in the press. It belongs in the locker room.

"John was hurt. He has every right to be. We shouldn't have said what we said outside the locker room. But CBS is at fault too. They showed poor judgment in putting it on national television."

The two Canadians in the tournament — Jim Nelford (74-71 — 145) and Dan Halldorson (72-73 — 145) — both missed the 36-hole cut.

RHODESIA RETURNS

ZURICH (Reuter) — Rhodesia, suspended by the International Football Federation (FIFA) in 1965, will compete in the 1982 World Cup soccer tourney.

Nancy returns to victory circle

COSTA MESA, Calif. (AP) — Nancy Lopez-Melton, given new life when leader JoAnn Washam bogied three of the last four holes, shot a two-under-par 69 Sunday to win the $150,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament at Mesa Verde Country Club for her first victory in six months.

Lopez-Melton, the tour's top money-winner the last two years, finished with a 72-hole total of even-par 284 on rounds of 72, 66, 77 and 69.

She overcame four bogies by firing six birdies to post her 18th victory in less than three years on the tour.

Third-round co-leaders Washam and Debbie Massey finished second, two strokes back, after closing with 72s.

"It felt like the first win," said an exuberant Lopez-Melton, who won eight tournaments last year when she earned a tour record $197,488 in 19 events.

"Winning tht first one as a pro was a big thing, but with all the pressure I was putting on myself, this was different," she said. "I felt so good I just wanted to cry. I just felt like all the pressure came off my shulders."

Washam and Lopez-Melton were roommates for this tourney for the second straight year. They said they had decided after Saturday's third round that they should stop helping each other's game and instead concentrate more on their own performances.

"We were rooting for each other to the point that we were taking away from our own games," Washam said. "We decided to go out and play golf."

The triumph, worth $22,500, moved Lopez-Melton into second place on the money list with $55,785 — $23,200 behind leader JoAnne Carner, who missed the cut.

Canadian Sandra Post finished five strokes back, at 289, to win $4,400 while Cathy Sherk of Port Colborne, Ont., who shared the first-round lead, closed with a 74 for 294 and won $1,440.

2 more hostages freed

BOGOTA (UPI) — Leftists guerrillas have released a Colombian judge and a businessman held hostage in the besieged Dominican Embassy, bringing the number of captives to 27, mostly diplomats.

U.S. Ambassador Diego Asencio is among the 19 diplomats being held for 34 days by members of the April 19 Movement (M-19), who are demanding a $50 million ransom and the release of jailed leftists.

Colombian Foreign Minister Diego Uribe Sunday ruled out for the time being any U.N. mediation in the 34-day-old crisis. In Vienna, U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim offered Saturday to intervene to try to resolve the hostage situation.

Speaking to reporters in Cali, Colombia's second largest city, located 200 miles southwest of Bogota, Uribe said of Waldheim's offer: "We can take care of our own matters, and we will see up to what point that's true."

An eighth round of negotiations between Colombian authorities and the M-19 guerrillas was scheduled for Tuesday morning.

"We are confident that Tuesday's session will facilitate a new advance," Uribe added, but gave no indications the government has budged from its position of not freeing any prisoners.

The release Sunday of the two Colombians, Simon Rodriguez, a judge, and Bogota businessman Jorge Valencia, came unexpectedly at twilight Sunday.

Both men, clean-shaven and wearing fresh clothes, put bags containing their belongings into a red Volkswagen, and then pushed it out of the driveway and to the military command post, located in an evacuated private home out of sight of the embassy.

They had been guests at the diplomatic reception Feb. 27 when the guerrillas invaded, taking a total of 57 hostages.

The two men were then driven to a military hospital in a black Mercedes for routine medical examinations. Both appeared to be in robust health.

Neither spoke to reporters and it was not immediately known why they were freed.

After they left, a doctor entered the embassy and stayed for about 30 minutes. The reason for the visit was not disclosed.

A total of 29 hostages have now been released. One captive, Uruguayan Ambassador Fernando Gomez, escaped.

Besides the American ambassador, others among the 19 diplomats remaining captive are heads of mission of Egypt, Israel, Switzerland, the Vatican and eight Latin American countries.

There are also also two Colombian foreign ministry officials and six private citizens still in the embassy.

CROONER DICK Haymes, popular big band vocalist in the 1940s has died in Los Angeles at 61 after a battle with lung cancer.

French clear embassy as strife in Chad grows

PARIS (UPI) — French diplomats evacuated their embassy in the devastated African capital of Chad Sunday because of renewed artillery and mortar firing between rival factions struggling for power in the land-locked nation, French government radio reported.

The radio said the diplomats took shelter in the French military base under the protection of 1,100 French paratroopers and marines but added they would not be leaving the former colony where the 16-year civil war flared up again eight days ago.

The embassy is not in the battle zone in the capital of N'djamena but is close to the palace of President Goukoni Weddeye. The palace has been a target for shelling by supporters of dissident Defense Minister Hissene Habre, defending the center of N'djamena, the radio reports said.

French diplomats were still trying to get Weddeye and Habre to negotiate a workable cease-fire to end the battle in which 1,000 combatants and civilians are believed to have been killed and another 2,000 wounded. The Cameroon and Sudan are also trying to act as intermediaries.

But both sides ignored pleas from the International Red Cross Saturday for a truce to permit the evacuation of dead and wounded, many of them children.

The central hospital is in the battle zone and there are reports it is unusable because there are three unexploded shells in it. All running water and electricity have been cut off for eight days.

An estimated 200,000 Chadians have sought refuge in nearby Cameroon over the last week. All but a handful of the 800 foreign residents, together with the U.S. ambassador and other Americans, have been evacuated.

Flooding devastates U.S. south

United Press International

National Guardsmen in flat-bellied "pirouges" today patrolled flood-swollen southern Louisiana waters on the lookout for looters and poisonous snakes. Residents in three Southern states fled their homes in the worse flooding since the turn of the century.

Flood waters, fueled by five days of heavy rain, drove more than 600 people from their homes in Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama. National Guardsmen in both Mississippi and Louisiana were called out, but no flood-related injuries or deaths were reported.

Flood waters were chest deep at Franklinton, La., Sunday, forcing the evacuation of about 400 people. The Bogue Chitto river was reported 8 feet over flood stage — at 20.5 feet. Franklinton officials said it was the worst flooding since 1900, when the river crested at more than 27 feet.

Washington Parish sheriff's office warned residents to prepare for another rise in the river early today despite Sunday's blue skies.

The National Weather Service advised residents to store adequate food, drinking water, medical and other supplies and said sandbagging might be needed to help keep water out of houses.

"Watch out for snakes and wet appliances," the service warned.

In Columbia, Miss., an estimated 200 families fled their homes in low-lying areas of Marion County as the murky brown waters of the Pearl River pushed toward an anticipated crest today of 27 feet — 10 feet above flood stage.

Many of the evacuees live in areas devastated during last year's record Easter flood. Some stacked sandbags Sunday in an effort to protect their property from the rising river, but others left in disgust.

Flooding also was reported in portions of Alabama and powerful thunderstorms rocked parts of southern Florida and northern Georgia with heavy rains and winds whipping to 40 mph Sunday. Tallahassee, Fla., was doused with an inch of rain in less than two hours.

In Pennsylvania, four young men drowned Sunday morning when their car went out of control in the fog and rain and tumbled down a 25-foot embankment into a creek near the community of Watsontown.

Holy week begins with pilgrimage

JERUSALEM (AP) — Thousands of pilgrims marked the opening of Holy Week this Palm Sunday by retracing Christ's entry into Jerusalem from the Mount of Olives.

In Vatican ceremonies opening Christianity's most holy week, Pope John Paul blessed palm fronds after a procession in front of St. Peter's Basilica to commemorate Christ's triumphal entry into Jerusalem the week he died.

Jerusalem's traditional procession was marred by a brief stone-throwing incident connected to Palestinian protests marking Land Day, which commemorates Arab-Israeli clashes four years ago over Israeli land expropriations in which six Arabs died.

Led by a Franciscan priest and Arab boy scouts, the worshippers singing hosannas and bearing palm fronds, wound down the steep hillside past the Garden of Gethsemane to the Pools of Bethesda inside the Old City.

Roller coaster mishap kills 2

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — Amusement park officials say they cannot explain why automatic braking systems failed to stop a roller coaster train before it slammed into another taking on passengers, killing a teenage boy.

Eight other people were injured Saturday when the train on the ride known as Willard's Wizzard rammed the second set of cars at a passenger loading station. It was the first fatal accident at the Marriott's Great America park since its opening in 1976.

Woman accepts flogging

MRS. ARNOT

LONDON (AP) — A British woman sentenced to a public flogging in Saudi Arabia for serving liquor at a party in the Moslem country says she will endure the 80 strokes of the cane if it spares her surgeon husband an additional jail term.

Penelope Arnot, 32, made her pledge this weekend in phone conversations with relatives in Britain, newspapers reported. She and her 36-year-old husband Richard are awaiting final judgment for breaking Saudi Arabia's strict Moslem ban on alcohol.

The Arnots were arrested last May after a party at their home in a Jidda. Two guests at the party, a British nurse and a Dutch construction worker, died in a fall from the Arnot's fifth-floor balcony after drinking.

Mrs. Arnot served four months in prison and her husband five. They were released to the British Embassy while Saudi authorities consider a court proposal that Mrs. Arnot be flogged and her husband be returned to jail for another seven months.

"She has said she will accept the lash if it means Richard's not going back to jail," said Arnot's brother Robert.

The British press said the flogging will be the first of a non-Moslem woman. Several foreign men have been flogged, including Britisher Brian Cooper.

Cooper got 70 strokes in public two years ago for illegally brewing liquor. Now back home, he told a reporter that the body traditionally is not bared during the flogging and the strokes on the back and buttocks are not allowed to draw blood. "But they do hurt and bruise," he added.

A Saudi Embassy spokesman in London said that the beating with a bamboo cane is a ceremonial punishment to humiliate and is not exceptionally severe.

He said the flogger cannot raise his hand very high because he has to have a copy of the Koran, the Moslem holy book, under the pit of the arm swinging the cane.

N-plant protest arrests

VERNON, Vt. (UPI) — Despite the arrest of 60 anti-nuclear protesters, more than 100 demonstrators camped out overnight in the parking lot of the Vermont Yankee nuclear power plant, vowing to shut down the facility today.

Sheriffs' deputies and state police officers left the plant site Sunday after arresting and processing 60 demonstrators, some of whom returned to be arrested again as soon as they were released.

The arrested protesters were dragged from the parking lot at the plant gates, frisked, photographed and hauled away to special processing centers before state police decided to stop making arrests.

The arrested protesters were given citations to appear in Vermont District Court in two weeks to face trespassing charges.

At least 100 other anti-nuclear protesters spent the night in sleeping bags and tents, watched over by 15 police officers.

In Washington, about 200 people attended an anti-nuclear rally across from the White House Sunday to commemorate the first anniversary of the Three Mile Island accident.

Late Sunday, Vermont Yankee did indeed shut down — for repairs. Plant officials who announced the closing last week said the two-day shutdown was unrelated to the protest.

It's not easy to believe that people with $23,000 to invest would do this, but they followed an inventor to a place in Illinois to await the arrival of a spaceship whose "magnetic motors" would transform powder buried down a mine shaft into fuel crystals. It was all part of a scam dreamed up by 70-year-old Guido French to bilk investors of money for his invention that he said could convert water to gasoline. "The posse finally caught up with me," he said after being convicted of fraud. "My chances of running for mayor are now dead."

A Tennessee chancery court judge has granted a motion providing for a copy of the secret autopsy report on Elvis Presley to be turned over to a grand jury investigating the singer's personal physician. Chancellor D. J. Alissandratos granted the motion at the request of assistant Shelby County district attorney Jewitt Miller. The controversial autopsy, which has never been released to the public, is under lock and seal in a Memphis bank vault.

Elvis Presley

Richard Harris has summoned Los Angeles divorce ace Marvin Mitchelson to his winter hideaway in the Bahamas to reactivate the divorce suit he filed last summer against wife Ann Turkel. Their 5-year on-again-off-again marriage is off again, and Harris says this time he's going through with its dissolution.

A freak gust of wind blew an elderly woman and the concrete bus bench she was sitting on across a busy street last week. The incident was witnssed by a police officer. Yoshiko Kitasaki, 73, landed in the middle of a California boulevard about 20 metres from the curb. Police officer Hugh Wilton, who saw the wind hurl the woman, said the bench landed about a metre away from the woman. A second concrete bench near the first one was also blown into the street but not as far. Wilton said the benches weigh about 150 to 200 pounds and it was a struggle for him and several other people to get them back to the sidewalk.

Apocalypse Now director Francis Ford Coppola is shooting again — this time in Madison, Wis., with California Gov. Jerry Brown as the star. Coppola calls the campaign special "an act of desperation" in Brown's sagging drive for the presidency.

Dear Abby:

I am a 38-year-old woman, living with my parents. (I am all the family they have.) Last year my mother (64) had a stroke which left her partially paralyzed. She walks with a cane and is confused at times, but she's cheerful and uncomplaining. My father, 67, is a practising physician, but he is no help at all. He comes home, eats, reads the newspaper, watches TV and goes to bed. If Mother needs the bedpan he comes looking for me to take care of it. When I go out, he forgets to give Mother her medication.

I'm engaged to be married this fall. It will be my second marriage and his first. We will be living only 10 minutes from my parents, so it's not as though I'll be deserting them. Although I realize that I do have a life to lead, I can't help but feel guilty getting married in this situation. I'm not young anymore, and want to have a family while I'm still able.

Please advise me.

S.O.S.

Dear S.:

Proceed with your marriage plans, and don't feel guilty. You'll live near enough to your mother to look in on her often. And I beg you to ask your father to please show a little more concern and compassion for your mother. I wish you joy. You deserve it.

Dear Abby:

I have been told that in Hawaii when a girl wears a flower over one of her ears it means that she is "taken" (has a boyfriend), but if she wears a flower over the other ear, it means that she is "looking," or available. I am going to the islands soon and would like to know which ear is which.

Ray

Dear Ray:

A flower over the left ear (same side her heart is on) means, "I'm spoken for." A flower over the right ear means, "I'm unattached." A flower over both ears means, "Let's negotiate."

Dear Abby:

When I was growing up, my mother drummed it into my head that I had bad breath, so I took to chewing gum because I was always self-conscious about my breath.

I learned how to chew gum inconspicuously. I could keep it in my mouth for hours without chewing it.

I still chew gum (I'm married now) but my husband hates it. He says it gets on his nerves. I never crack it, and I'm careful not to chew it a lot in company, but he still does't like it. He says it's offensive, ill-mannered and childish.

What do you think?

Likes To Chew

Dear Likes:

I think it's refreshing, good exercise and a bit of a treat if done in private. But if it irritates your husband, your gum-chewing may not be as inconspicuous as you think it is. Chew in private, and don't stretch your luck.

Tear down the Glenshiel? Ridiculous!

The provincial government octopus has its greedy eye on the site of the Glenshiel Hotel for yet another parking lot, and I most heartily hope that it can be persuaded to cease and desist. For the Glenshiel is not merely an age-mellowed fixture on Victoria's lower Douglas Street. It is a monument to a city and a way of life that has all but passed from the scene.

It's true that you may once in a while still catch a glimpse of the older Victoria. An elderly, straight-backed gentleman in tweeds, perhaps. With muffler around his neck and dog on a lead, taking the morning air. Or it may be a lady of mature years, dressed in a mode of another day, sitting bolt upright in the back of some antique, chauffeur-driver car.

But the Glenshiel makes an island in the midst of the hustling modernity that surrounds it. Leisure exists there. Also a quality which for lack of a more precise word, I might define as grace.

It's possible, of course, that the Glenshiel may have changed in the years since I was a guest there with Toronto-smart chick and child. Still, that seems unlikely. among its graces . . . there's that word again! . . . was akind of agelessness.

We had planned a holiday on the coast, and we picked the Glenshiel sight unseen from the Victoria telephone book. The name promised Scottish integrity and quiet dignity. It hinted of dark-varnished woodwork and ancient sepia prints on its walls.

When we told a cab driver to take us to the Glenshiel, he hesitated and look at us strangely.

"You sure that's where you want to go?" he asked us.

"I'm sure," I told him.

He shrugged, and eased his cab away from the curb.

Our little troop, two parents and two frisky children, mounted the steps to the Glenshiel. Inside, I was mildly surprised to note a Sister of one of the more substantial Catholic orders flitting through the dim lobby. A Sister waited for us behind the reception desk too.

Neat in her black and white, she greeted us with the kindest smile in the world.

"Are you sure this is where you'd like to stay?" she asked. Then, in explanation, she added: "It's just that we don't see many young families here."

I looked at Win. She nodded. We assured the Sister that we wanted to stay at the Glenshiel.

"Why then," she said with another smile, "We'll do our best to make you comfortable."

And that the good Sisters did. We were conducted to a room which was precisely as I'd imagined it would be, even to the murky print of Highland cattle under lowering clouds by Ben Nevis.

Our bed was royal: of vast expanse, and with a carved wooden headboard. But where were our children to sleep?

For answer, the Sister who had us in charge reached under the big bed and pulled out a little trundle-bed that might well have cossetted Bonnie Prince Charlie in his infancy. Then she turned to the stately darkwood bureau, and tugged open the bottom drawer.

"For the little one," she said.

We were captivated, our children as well as us. But the piece de resistance was still to come.

Ron, exploring, darted through a doorway. He returned pop-eyed, and so awed he could barely squeak words.

"The bathtub!" he managed. "Come see the bathtub!"

That bath was not merely impressive. It was magnificent. It lorded it on top of a three-step dias, on which it stood on brass lion's feet. And it was at least twice the size of a standard, squidgy domestic tub. A man could swim in it. An unattended child could drown in it.

We went down next morning to a sunshiny dining room where old people sat decorously at their tables, each with a napkin in a wooden ring, waiting to be served.

Children were rare visitors here. Ours came in for countless smiles . . . pats in passing . . . many kind words. The little hams basked in this climate of approval: they surprised us by behaving like angels.

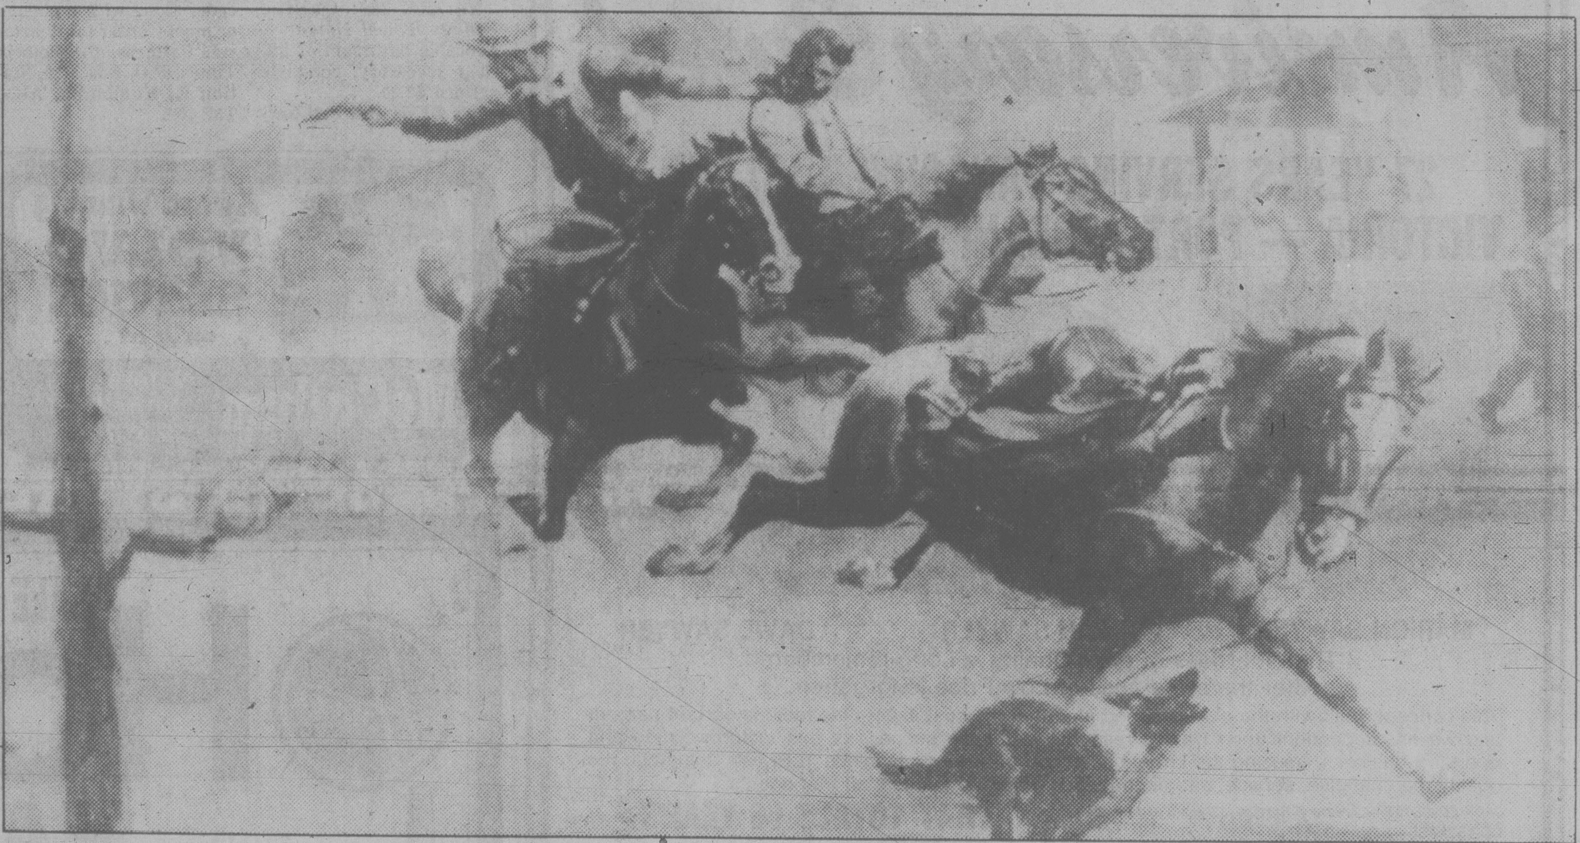
Before we checked out, it became necessary for me to make a long-distance telephone call.

"You know," said the gentle Sister at the switchboard, "we're rarely asked to put in a long-distance call. I'm not sure quite how to proceed."

Together, we muddled it through. I got my party, and from the smiles, it was apparent that all the angels were singing in heaven.

We left the Glenshiel bearing memories that remain green.

That's why I earnestly hope the provincial government will continue to look elsewhere for its parking-lot site. The Glenshiel is unique. Like a kind word in a naughty world, it is much too good to lose!



The cowboy legend still haunts the dreams of many a city slicker and now merchants are finding there's gold in the dream

The urban cowboy struts his stuff

TORONTO (CP) — Willie Nelson and Waylon Jennings sing a lament begging mamas not to let their babies grow up to be cowboys — but Dann Finn figures not too many people will heed the advice.

Finn owns Urban Cowboy, a Toronto store specializing in authentic Stetson hats, button-fly pants and boots and he says he expects to sell a whopping 500,000 pairs of boots this year.

"I've had 55-year-old Bay Street lawyers coming into my store and saying, 'Gee, I've always wanted a pair of cowboy boots.' "

Urban Cowboy took seed one Saturday night while Finn was relaxing with some beer and some friends. Finn, a former model who was already divided between art and food businesses, was asked: "What next?"

"Cowboy boots," muttered Finn, looking down at his feet. By Monday, the blueprints were laid out and now, six months later, the store is thriving.

It's not merely a fad but a lifestyle people are buying, he says.

"Western boots are incredible boots. You can walk over pebbles with them and you don't feel them. These boots are a hell of a piece of good footwear. Once you have them you don't put them aside."

Roger Hamelin, marketing director of Boulet, Canada's largest boot manufacturer located in St. Tite, Que., says the people in Calgary aren't really cowboys — they only think about oil.

"The people in Ontario are the real cowboys."

At Picov's Horseman's Centre, a 30-minute drive from downtown Toronto, Patricia Ball rides her prize quarter-horse into the dirt arena and puts him through his turns.

Wearing high, shiny black kid leather boots, black chaps, shirt and Stetson, Ms. Ball says she has two different lifestyles.

During the week she works in the Metropolitan Toronto borough of Scarborough's tax office. On weekends, she competes in barrel racing or goes for pleasure rides.

"Sometimes I think I could leave this, because of the money and the time," she says. "I won't leave it completely, though. I think I would always have one horse."

Lee Foster, 30, keeps seven horses at his farm near Sarnia, Ont., which he trains for city folk from Toronto and London. But his main occupation is far more strenuous — and lucrative.

"I started blacksmithing out of necessity," Foster says. "You're looking at a horse population that's larger than when horses were used every day. If I want to travel, I can make $500 to $600 a week."

Scott Kennedy, 24, who trains nine horses on his farm near Kettleby, Ont., says showing them is "seven-days-a-week work."

"The youths are getting more involved in this," he says. "Parents are saying they would rather have their boys out riding than just wearing cowboy boots and smoking dope . . . .

By DR. BOB YOUNG

In a recent column some two weeks ago I pointed out the precautions required when a common drug, A.S.A. or aspirin, is used. The purpose was not to decry the use of this often effective agent, but to illustrate that even a commonly used material may have adverse effects in certain people or when taken with other medications.

Some side effects are predictable and can be avoided. Patients taking blood thinners or diabetes pills should not take aspirin as the effects of the more important drug may be altered.

Adverse effects may be a function of A.S.A. alone, unrelated to other medication but possibly associated with a degree of sensitivity on the part of the patient. Often they are dose-related and can be avoided if fewer aspirin are taken.

Stomach upsets are common and consist of nausea, vomiting, bowel frequency, and even bleeding and ulceration of the stomach. Aspirin should be taken with a full glass of water and should be chewed first to effect dilution before reaching the stomach.

Dizziness, ringing in the ears, and hearing loss may be caused by A.S.A. These symptoms are temporary, and disappear if the drug is stopped or the dosage is reduced.

Hives, itchiness and eruptions of the skin may be caused by the drug. These are due to an allergic type of reaction as are the asthmatic attacks and occasional allergic collapse seen with even small doses.

Blood clotting factors may be decreased by A.S.A., increasing the tendency to bleed. Some people become drowsy or mentaly confused when they take the drug, and others complain of sweating and increased thirst.

All drugs have contraindications, precautions, and adverse effects. I have used A.S.A. as an illustration only because it is a familiar medicine. It is also a useful drug, and when utilized properly its benefits far outweigh its dangers.

The same is true of most other medications. The potential benefit to the patient must be balanced by possible danger in using the drug. A potent, hazardous, or addicting drug should not be used for a minor illness. Such a drug may very well be indicated in the treatment of serious disease when drug risk becomes of secondary importance.

Dr. Young welcomes letters from his readers. Personal replies, however, are not possible and only topics of broadest interest will be referred to. Write c/o the Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, V8W 2N4.

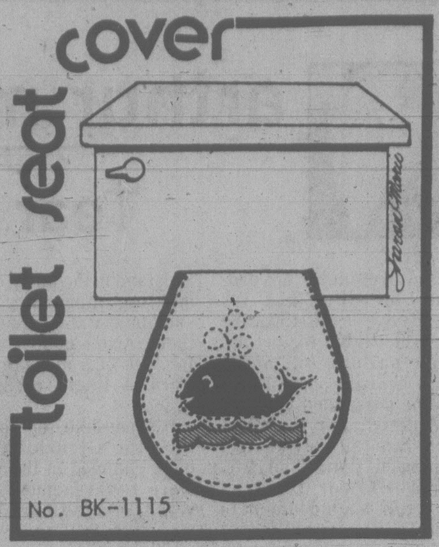
Nifty whale for seat cover



No. BK-1115

This little whale was designed by Barb Kelcy, now of Victoria, and is just one suggestion for decorating a custom-designed Toilet Seat Cover for your powder room or bathroom.

He's done in simple applique, with quilting stitch designs for the outlines and the spurt of water. Pattern BK-1115 contains the complete pattern for him, plus suggestions for other decorating designs.

You might like to take a flower from a wallpaper design and turn it into an applique pattern, or do simple patchwork — squares, triangles, rectangles, or a log cabin block. You can also do string patchwork, which is fast and easy, or crazy quilting — fun to do with scraps.

One of the prettiest quilting shops I've ever seen is in an old house in Houston, Texas, It's called The Quilt Collector. Its bathroom has a beautiful white shower curtain with blue patchwork.

If you like plants, you can use leaf shapes (very common in quilt blocks) in the form of wreaths, with floral designs. There's no limit to the variety you can incorporate into the designs. If your toilet is situated next to the sink and your little children stand on the cover to brush their teeth, this will give them a soft, safe base on which to stand.

Complete directions are included in this pattern on the basics of designing a cover for any shape toilet seat, plus ideas and suggestions to help you decide which technique or design to choose. Measuring instructions make it easy to custom fit your design — it's similar to making a chair seat pad, or place mats for a round or oval table. Once you know the basics, you can follow through with your ideas with ease.

Thermolam is a new pellon product which is ideal for mats or covers such as these. It stays flat, won't bunch, and washes well. As this cover is an item which will be washed often, as are place mats and baby quilts, you will want to choose fabrics keeping this in mind.

Raid your scrap bag — you'll find all sorts of great things you can use. You may want to make several so that you can change them often. If you've been wanting to try a quilt block, this is a good item to use. You do not necessarily have to use it for a whole quilt top. With these simple cover basics, you'll be set for a fresh new look in the bathroom!

Patterns available: No. BK-1115: Toilet Seat Cover Basics: As described, plus actual-size whale, fish and flower petal patterns. $2.20.

No. KK-280: Quilted Froggy Towel Holder — Adorable bathroom or kitchen accessory, complete pattern. $2.20.

No. BK-71 Hot Pad Cozy Place Mats — use this concept for decorating appliqued place mats in shapes such as Easter eggs, flowers, animals, Christmas trees and other motifs while protecting good table surfaces from hot plates. $3.20.

No. BK-61: Super Simple Baby Quilt — easy frame on frame construction makes this the simplest and fastest of baby quilt projects. $3.20.

How to order: Send your name, address and postal code, along with a cheque or money order to: Hearthside Patterns, c/o Victoria Times, P.O. Box 9120, Station E, Edmonton, Alta. T5P 4K2.

Aid for elderly housing urged

Older Canadians should be able to choose where they want to live rather than being forced into subsidized housing projects in unfamiliar neighborhoods.

To achieve this, cash housing allowances to help pay the rent in accommodation of a person's choice are recommended by George Coleman, general manager of Metro Toronto Housing Corp., an agency providing low-rent accommodation for the elderly.

Variations of such an allowance system already are in operation in British Columbia, Alberta and Manitoba and federal government participation is possible (the Conservative government was planning such aid before its defeat).

Current municipal programs which oblige seniors to move to subsidized dwellings often involve unwelcome changes. The move means leaving old friends and neighbors.

Churches and social groups to which people have long belonged then may be too far away to attend regularly, if at all. Shopping has to be done in new and perhaps less convenient and more costly locations (shoppers may no longer be able to deal with a supermarket offering seniors' discounts). Public transportation routes may be less satisfactory than familiar ones in the old area.

Readers' letters emphasize that having to move, leaving accustomed surroundings, is an upsetting experience. This is particularly true when forced to move from a house with its happy memories, the pleasures of grounds and garden, into an affordable, subsidized apartment.

It should be recognized, however, that some seniors welcome the change — leaving a house that may be old and difficult to handle for a modern, well-equipped apartment.

However, seniors should have a choice, Mr. Coleman says.

It need not be a drain on the public purse. In British Columbia, for example, it is reported that their allowance program is less costly than the subsidies required for operating public housing projects.

An exchange of information between provinces would be helpful. In Manitoba, for example, they have decided that seniors paying more than 30 per cent of their annual income on rent are eligible for an allowance.

Gordy Webster. . . . ready for any emergency

The VE stands for Canada, the 7 designates British Columbia and the last three letters are his personal identification as an amateur or ham-radio operator.

A title, he emphasizes, "that must not be confused with a CB (civilian band) operator."

In a quiet corner of his home there are two up-to-date pieces of equipment.

One is powerful enough to reach around the world. The other is for contact anywhere on Vancouver Island, the mainland of British Columbia or Washington State.

Very often he is at those machines as early as four or five in the morning and he is monitoring and communicating (frequently as a public service) until late at night.

He talks, from time to time, with others like himself, in New Zealand, Germany, Mexico, Bermuda, Russia, across Canada and into the Northwest Territories.

When he reaches someone for a first time the question that immediately goes back and forth is — what's your handle?

To amateur radio operators that really means — what's your first name?

With that question answered both ways, contact is made, an all-time friendship established and communication, from then on, is never anything but on a first-name basis.

Webster was recently elected president of the 150-member Victoria Short Wave Club, oldest group of its kind in Canada.

Earlier this month the club received a 50-year certificate of service from the Canadian branch of the American Radio Relay League, the first to be presented in this country.

A decided honor, Webster says, but few people know about it.

Or, for that matter, about the work of the short wave club itself.

"The public as a whole write us off as a bunch of guys involved merely with a pleasant hobby.

"Very few know of the time we give and the work we do in public service of varying kinds."

Here he points out that the Victoria Short Wave Club is active in the provincial government emergency program (formerly civil defence) under direction of Rupert Grant, co-ordinator for amateur radio clubs in the area and the program's communications branch.

The club also acts as a communications link between rinks and headquarters during Old Timers hockey tournaments and between organizing groups, check points and cars, during vintage car rallies.

In many instances members are equipped with immediate communication facilities through what they call repeaters that bring all of Vancouver Island, the mainland and Washington State within range.

"You'd be surprised at the number of amateurs, like myself, operating or monitoring a certain repeater or frequency while most of the public is asleep," Webster says.

Members are also continuously on the alert to give highway help in cases of emergencies and through mobile radio equipment in their cars to contact police or ambulance services.

Another field in which the club takes an active role is in assisting the blind to prepare for examinations and tests in order to qualify for an amateur radio licence.

It takes 80 hours study, on an average, to learn the code, sending and receiving and all the technical needs.

"We also help in construction of their station, or shack as we call it, and our members are ready at all times with proper operation procedures."

In charge of this program is club member Sid Young who works in co-operation with the Victoria Branch of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind at its Blanshard Street headquarters.

Webster himself has been an amateur radio operator and a station licencee since 1936.

At that time he was employed as a commercial operator aboard Great Lakes ships out of Lachine, Quebec.

A friend persuaded him to look at amateur radio. He did, and in his own words, "I've been active in the field ever since."

During the Second World War, when all amateur radio communications were off the air, Webster was a navy wireless operator, at Patricia Bay where he trained air force personnel; at Halifax aboard ship and in a signals school and then back at the Pacific Coast aboard the Price David and cruising from Esquimalt to Bermuda and Port of Spain, and on West Coast patrol.

Final posting was to Ste. Hyacinthe, about 40 miles east of Montreal, where he met and mrried his wife Jean, who served during the war as a WREN.

Back in civilian life there was a short time with General Electric and then, from 1946 to 1973, when he retired, with Air Canada.

Like many another who served here during wartime, Webster vowed that he would return some day to live.

"However, the place of birth does pull," he confesses, "and we stayed at Dorval for five years after I retired."

Then, during a short illness in 1978, he was forced to watch his wife shovel heavy snow.

That did it!

Postscript — The Victoria Short Wave Club meets on the third Thursday each month. Members enjoy talking about their equipment and their work.

Anyone interested, whether amateur operator or wishing to become an amateur operator is welcome to attend those meetings.

Merchant of Venice bounced

MIDLAND, Mich. (AP) — Shakespeare's The Merchant of Venice has been removed temporarily from the 10th-grade curriculum at Midland High School because a citizens' committee feared anti-Semitism described in the play might be offensive. The issue will be reviewed at a school board meeting next month.

Buying tips from drycleaner

common cents

by kate macqueen

At spring clearance sales, keep in mind tips from a drycleaning specialist. A wool skirt with intricate pleats needs at least 55 per cent nylon, polyester or acetate for preserving the pleats. In acrylic knitwear, graying of whites and darkening of brights are common because static electricity attracts soil.

New or used, good upholstered furniture has signals for shoppers. Fabric in the skirt or loose back returns to shape when you stretch it. Welting and seams are stitched straight. Padding covers the wood frame along the bottom and above legs. The fabric doesn't "pill" (form a ball) with a good rub or "crock" (release color) when rubbed with a white cloth.

Get out your umbrella and boots during a good spring rain and check gutters and downspouts around the house. Clogged downspouts cause overflowing gutters and paint damage or damper basements. If a downspout's too short to shoot water away from the house, buy a section of spouting at a hardware store. Take along a tin cutter in case you have to buy an eight-foot section that won't fit in your car.

At least scan the "stuffing" that comes with monthly charge account statements. You may read that your billing date has been changed and so has the net payment deadline. You begin paying interest immediately on new charges if you didn't pay all of the old balance due.

Soviets rush to build warships: U.S. analysts

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. intelligence analysts say the Soviet Union is stepping up construction of new warships, including a probable 50 per cent increase in powerful missile-armed cruisers.

They say the Soviet Union's shipbuilding program for the 1980s seems to place greater emphasis on improving Soviet ability to project naval power into remote areas such as the Persian Gulf.

The Soviet Navy, once a basically defensive force, has been extending its range of operations for more than a decade with a variety of advanced warships, including the beginnings of a carrier force.

It still is rated deficient in shipping for amphibious warfare and at-sea resupply but is making inroads on those problems, the analysts say.

Soviet planners appear to be focusing on cruisers, with four new classes of bigger, more potent and more sophisticated ships reported under construction in Soviet shipyards.

Intelligence sources say the latest available information indicates more than 10 such ships are under construction and it is estimated conservatively that about 25 such ships could join the Soviet fleet by the end of the decade.

Intelligence specialists predict that, on the basis of what they now see, the Soviet cruiser fleet will probably increase to 60 ships during the 1980s, compared with fewer than 40 at present.

Of particular immediate interest is the first ship of a new class called the Kirov, a 25,000-30,000-ton warship which senior naval officers believe may be the Soviet Union's first nuclear-powered fighting ship.

It is expected to enter the Soviet operating fleet this year. A second ship of the Kirov class, which is more than twice the size of the latest U.S. nuclear-powered cruisers, is nearing completion and analysts predict it will become combat-ready by 1983, to be followed by others of the same type.

U.S. Navy intelligence analysts say they expect the Kirov cruisers to form the nuclei of far-ranging task forces.

The Soviet Navy also is said to be building an 8,000-ton successor to the Kresta II cruiser, which has impressed the U.S. Navy since it appeared with the Soviet fleet in the late 1960s.

U.S. naval experts have been sifting persistent reports that they say indicate the Russians probably are building a nuclear-powered aircraft carrier of about 50,000 tons, the biggest such ship yet undertaken by Soviet naval designers. This carrier is expected to be in commission by 1987, possibly leading the way for more ships of that class.

— A force of amphibious warfare assault ships. The Ivan Rogov, first of these 13,000-ton vessels built to carry Soviet naval infantry, is believed destined for service in the Indian Ocean fairly soon.

UNPOPULAR SIGN was blasted again Sunday when the second bomb in three days tore this hole in a pro-Canada billboard in Montreal, as the Quebec referendum debate gets into full gear.

Anthrax in Russia weapon-linked: U.S.

New York Times

WASHINGTON — The Carter administration has concluded on the basis of new intelligence information that an outbreak of anthrax in the Soviet Union last year did not result from natural causes but from an accident at a biological weapons facility, government officials said.

The officials said that the administration recently received reports about the outbreak of the disease near the Soviet city of Sverdlovsk from sources saying they were witnesses to the incident. The officials disclosed details of the reports in an apparent effort to back up a State Department allegation two weeks ago that Moscow might have violated the terms of a 1975 convention that bans the development, production or stockpiling of biological agents or toxins.

The intelligence reports, officials disclosed, trace the origins of the outbreak to a military installation near Sverdlovsk and provide medical information that is said to eliminate the possibility that the disease occurred naturally, as Moscow recently stated.

On March 18, a State Department spokesman told reporters that the administration had received "disturbing indications" that a large number of people may have been contaminated in April 1979 in Sverdlovsk by a "lethal biological agent." The officials said that American officials had raised the matter at sessions called to discuss compliance with the 1975 accord on germ warfare.

Moscow quickly informed Washington that while an outbreak of anthrax had occurred in Sverdlovsk, a city of 1.2 million people, the disease had been caused by improper handling of meat products. Some American aides, in private, said the Soviet explanation might be accurate.

In public, however, the State Department said that the possibility of a natural outbreak of the disease had been ruled out. On Friday, a high-ranking intelligence aide said that the new information left "no doubt that the Soviets aren't telling the truth."

In particular, the official said intelligence given to the administration showed that many Soviet residents in Sverdlovsk had contracted pulmonary anthrax, a form of the disease that affects the lungs after the anthrax organisms are inhaled.

The offical maintained that if, as Moscow asserted, the outbreak had been caused by bad meat, the Soviet citizens would have contracted gastric anthrax, a form of the disease that attacks the digestive system.

Other officials said that when the disease outbreak was first discovered, Soviet authorities sealed off a large tract of land around a military installation outside Sverdlovsk.

However, the majority of casualties, according to the reports received by the administration, occurred at a ceramics factory located downwind from the military site and nearby residential areas.

Officials said the form of anthrax spread by the accident was apparently highly virulent and medical personnel and laboratory technicians had been brought in from Moscow to monitor the outbreak.

Keys spoke language of Mozart

By AUDREY JOHNSON

The relationship between a pianist and his instrument seems to most people less personal than that between other kinds of artists and instruments.

One simple reason is that the piano is large; it is not handled or cradled like string and wind instruments.

Nevertheless, and in a very real sense for the finest artists in the genre, the piano does become an extension of the human personality.

Such a towering presence as Van Cliburn, for instance, seems to subjugate the piano to his will; a Rubinstein approaches as a lover, caressing, surrounding it with a romantic glow, exhorting it to passionate utterance.

For Paul Badura-Skoda the piano speaks a language he knows perhaps better than any other pianist on today's concert platform; the language of Mozart.

With his noted musicologist wife, Dr. Eva Badura-Skoda, the Viennese artist was a guest at the just-concluded Mozart celebration presented by the School of Music of the University of Victoria.

At the weekend Badura-Skoda appeared twice; on Friday in an all-Mozart recital and Sunday with George Corwin and the Little Orchestra of UVic when he played Mozart's Concerto in C Major K. 503. Earlier in the week, Dr. Eva had presented a lively and absorbing lecture on the cadenzas in Mozart's operatic arias.

But for the many people who are Mozart devotees, the Friday recital was undoubtedly a highlight in a week that had provided many satisfying and memorable moments.

For his program Badura-Skoda had selected five works, including the not so frequently heard Fantasy and Fugue in C Major K. 394, a lovely, tender Adagio in B minor, and the very familiar variations Sonata in A Major K. 331.

From the outset we were bathed in pure classical style expressed in fluently comprehensive technique and power.

And all this strictly yet lovingly moulded to give a true, scholarly and sympathetic interpretation of 18th century keyboard music on a 20th century concert grand.

This perfection of dynamic control to the most minute degree, the pristine period sense, was reflected throughout the program.

The liquid sound of the most fragile passages, the silky ribbons of legato phrasing and the limpid fluently articulated ornaments were a constant joy.

Refinement and elegance were constant as the apparel of the performance, but emotion and strength provided the inner substance.

Saanich debates land use

Saanich council will be asked tonight to consider using part of the Maltwood property near the Royal Oak shopping centre for a park and ride site.

Dale Snowdon, president of the Royal Oak Merchants Association, made the proposal in a letter which also asks that B.C. Hydro extend bus service along Quadra to the centre.

Passengers now travelling to Royal Oak must now transfer at the Town and Country shopping centre.

Snowdon says the park and ride site is needed because workers are using the centre's lot to park their cars and travel downtown by bus.

He says it has posed no problems so far but could do so in the future.

Rites set for Collins

A funeral service will be held at 2 p.m. Tuesday at the United Church in Duncan for Lawrence David Collins, 54, better known as Shorts Collins.

Collins, who lived on a small farm just south of Duncan, was killed in an accident near his home on Wednesday when his car went off the road and struck a tree.

For many years Collins commuted between Vancouver Island and Calgary, where he had business interests. He also was involved in several business ventures on the island, including Shortts restaurant in Harbor Square.

An avid golfer, he was a familiar figure on the Cowichan and Colwood courses.

He is survived by his wife Betty, their eight children, three grandchildren and two brothers, who live in Alberta.

Belt-tightening in arts urged

MONTREAL (CP) — Until recently, the Canadian government spent more money per citizen on the arts than the U.S. government.

That's changing now. Theatre groups, like other Canadian artists, are having to come to grips with frozen grants that, when inflation is taken into consideration, amount to a reduction in real funding.

Maybe they should investigate the John Goodwin difference. Goodwin, one of the few independant theatre producers in the country, and he believes his method of operating is the way for the 1980s.

"In the arts, people in Canada had better start getting used to the idea of doing with less," says Goodwin, whose Compagne des Deux Chaises has successfully produced 25 productions in Canada, the U.S. and Europe without a cent of government aid.

Goodwin stresses the point jokingly when he recalls how he put his wife, his kids, "even my bicycle" up as collateral for one of his first productions, Demain Matin, Montreal m'Attend (Tomorrow Morning, Montreal Awaits Me).

Canadian history 'distorted' in $10M film

EDMONTON (CP) — A Hong Kong-based film company is guilty of brutal distortion of Canadian history, Western Canadian author Rudy Wiebe said Friday.

Wiebe said Arctic Rampage, a $10-million feature film about Albert Johnson — the "mad trapper of Rat River" who was the target of an RCMP Arctic search in 1931-32 — "is a horrible rip-off of a fine heritage."

He said the movie, which stars Charles Bronson and Lee Marvin, twists history and turns RCMP Cpl. Edgar Millen into a villain and trapper-murderer Johnson into a hero.

"It destroys a part of our heritage, a part of our vital past. It maligns Cpl. Millen and glorifies a murderer.

"It's a good story — a kind of marvellous, positive study of our own past . . . that I want told the right way."

Arctic Rampage, a production of Golden Harvest Films of Hong Kong, is being filmed near Banff, Alta. Its producers could not be reached for comment.

Wiebe accused the film writers of using ideas from a script he wrote in 1978.

Johnson, a trapper in the Aklavik area of the Northwest Territories, shot and wounded RCMP Constable Alfred King on Dec. 31, 1931. Johnson killed Millen and wounded two other men before he was finally surrounded and killed 48 days later.

Wop May, a famed bush pilot and First World War ace, played a role in the pursuit by transporting supplies to RCMP patrols.

Wiebe said that in Arctic Rampage, May is depicted as a trigger-happy pilot named Hank Tucker who kills half an RCMP posse by spraying them with bullets from his plane.

Peter Lown, Wiebe's lawyer, hand-delivered a letter to the secretary of state's office in Ottawa in an attempt to prevent Arctic Rampage from being filmed in Canada.

"It is almost impossible to imagine how two Hollywood writers have tortured this relatively straightforward action story of endurance and bravery in the long Arctic darkness into a phantasm of vicious, gory violence," the letter said.

"Edgar Millen (played by Marvin) is no longer the dedicated, popular policeman of 35, whose killing roused the entire North; he is now a 55-year-old drunken sot who occasionally rises from his stupor to fornicate with Inuit or Indians or to administer his 'Millen's law'."

Me, go to dancing school?

My word. What would our friends at the club say? I mean, really, we're not the kind who go to dancing school. Dancing school is where my daughter learns ballet. Right?

Wrong. Now I know differently. Dancing school is where all kinds of interesting people (singles, marrieds, young, old) learn to dance. And I love it.

You'll love it, too. You can learn the Hustle. Swing. Cha-cha. Slow Dance. Rock. And it's so easy. Would you believe my darling Charles and I were the hit of the Charity Ball?

Call Arthur Murray's. It's really the thing to do.

Opening lead — five of clubs.

Declarer is often faced with the problem of guessing a two-way finesse for a queen, and very often the contract depends on the accuracy of his decision. Consider this deal where Bobby Wolff of the Dallas Aces played a star role in the 1971 world championship match between the United States and France.

Wolff was declarer in four hearts and West led a low club to East's ace. East returned a spade to his partner's ace and West, after cashing the king of clubs, led another spade.

The ball was now in Wolff's court. He had to find a way to avoid a trump loser. Ordinarily, with this heart combination, declarer does best by leading first the king and then the ten, planning to finesse.

But Wolff, after studying the matter carefully, concluded that these were not ordinary circumstances. It seemed to him that West was more likely to have the queen of trumps than East, judging from his decision to cash the king of clubs before returning a spade.

Backing his judgment to the hilt, Wolff won the spade return in his hand with the queen and led the jack of trumps. West covered with the queen, fully expecting to score the setting trick with the nine later on.

But West never did score his nine. Wolff took the queen in dummy with the king, played a diamond to his ace, led the eight of hearts and finessed after West followed low!

So Wolff made four hearts by guessing the location of not only the queen of hearts but also the nine. He had brilliantly abandoned the mathematical percentages and substituted his own excellent judgment in their place — which is exactly what it takes to win world championships.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Follow through on teaching-learning process-give full rein to intuitive intellect. Hunch is likely to be on target. Cancer, Leo, Aquarius individuals are likely to play key roles. You could locate object that had been lost or stolen.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Diversify, expand base of operations, take a more independent stance, follow through on your own judgment. Your ingenuity comes into play. Elements of luck, timing combine in your favor. Gemini, Sagittarius natives figure prominently.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Concentrate on where you want to go, basic concerns, issues and responsibilities. Check financial status of one who would work closely with you. Capricorn, Libra, Cancer persons figure prominently. Older individual could aid — if you toss aside false pride.

IF APRIL 1 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are independent, a pioneer, a romantic; you also are creative, stubborn and have been accused of having a one-track mind. Leo, Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. December could be one of your most memorable months of 1980, a year featuring possible addition to family, significant changes, travel and the kind of romance in which you discover or rediscover loved one. You make exciting, new contacts in May. This month, April, you can rid yourself of unnecessary burden. You are due for more freedom, added recognition and opportunity to grab brass ring of happiness.

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"You figure it out," said Harry. "In four years' time Jerry will be twice as old as Bob."

Mr. Hunter answers all letters: ideas welcomed.

I'D LIKE TO MEET A MAN, who could answer this ad without embarrassment because he wants to meet a bright woman, under 30, interested in sailing and photography. I'd like a relationship on mutual trust rather than role playing. Please respond honestly and with respect. Victoria Press Box 291.

PROFESSIONAL SINGLE Woman, mid 30's with demanding job, enjoys varied interests including sports, travelling, reading, cooking, dining out. Would like to meet honest, sincere, unattached Man with similar, varied interests to attempt to develop a lasting relationship. Victoria Press Box 312.

UNATTACHED PROFESSIONal man, mid forties, seeks lady friend on whom to lavish his affection. I enjoy sailing, cycling, music, laughter, elegant dining, theatre. Occasionally I like wearing ladies apparel in my home. Box 6492 Station C, Victoria, V8P 5M4.

39 PERSONALS

LADIES WOULD YOU LIKE TO travel by lands or sea? For as long and as far as you want. If you are single, divorced, separated or single parent, no triangles please, age is not a factor. If you are in a rut read on. I am forty and debt free, have no ties, 6' tall, 200 pounds, can afrod to do what little boys dream about and old men can't. Have a very large and plush car, travel in an extra large executive type holiday trailer, loaded with extras, microwave, TV, stereo, air conditioning, built—in power plant, can stop anyplace you please. Also have a very large live—aboard twin motored power boat, both trailer and boat have separate bedrooms for the ladies own convenience. This is your choice. Have not yet bought an airplane, sorry about this, but can fly. I like sports and outdoor life and have lots of hobbies. If you'd like to get away for a few days in the middle of the week or weekend, for a month or longer, I'm easy, the time is your own. The trailer or the boat are not sinbin's, I like to travel in comfort, but not alone. I've just arrived on the Island, and it's a lot nicer to travel with a companion, if you have funds, fine, if not, be my guest. There are no obligation whatsoever attached to this. Just honest, compatible relationship, and some trust. All it takes is a 17¢ stamp, a few minutes of your time and mine. I would like a photo, but not necessary. I hate writing, a phone is easier. Hold this ad for future reference. Victoria Press Box 243.

Watchdog Richards Report #163. Congratulations to Victoria's Police Chief William Snowdon for requesting the police board hire more police constables to enable the new chief to carry out his proposed plans. Grow corn on balcony? Sure gardening

hilda beastall

Utilizing available space on a sunny balcony however small it may be, will add much to the lives of those who live in the apartment. Just now I'm thinking in terms of using the space for growing fresh food.

As rents and other shelter costs rise, some way must be found for those living in multiple dwellings to meet the costs.

Even a half dozen kinds of home grown food plants through a season may encourage the buying of less costly foods to combine with those grown at home.

Some balconies seen can be no more than six by eight feet yet because they are open on three sides they have the potential of growing an assortment of vegetables from April to October, followed by a few extras to brighten daily winter meals.

In themselves, the vegetables grown may not reach a high total in dollars, but other basic foods bought to go with them could be those of lower prices though of high quality in nutrition.

While each balcony gardener must choose the kind of vegetables most suitable, here are a few suggestions.

Remember quantities will not be great unless the number of dfferent kinds is sacrificed in favor of one bumper crop of vine-ripened tomatoes for example, or perhaps tomatoes and sweet peppers.

Indeed one could do a lot worse than concentrate on these two if the balcony faces south or southwest. Heat will be trapped yet there will be air movement. The temperature will be a little higher at night than at ground level in spring and early fall, thus lengthening the growing season.

Tomatoes and sweet peppers are known to be abundantly high in essential minerals as well as in vitamins A and C. Their use while fresh could well replace the more expensive oranges and orange juice.

Sweet peppers can also be frozen for winter use, and are considered almost equal to the fresh peppers.

Another gardener might want to grow two crops of Golden Midget sweet corn. The plants are only 2½ feet high in a open garden; possibly 6 inches more in a three sides open balcony with a roof, and cobs are about 4 inches.

Because plants are small, the small ears soon appear. If seeds are put in so that a cross wind will pollinate from the tassels to the cobs, there will be a good set.

Other balcony gardeners may concentrate on growing the French dwarf green beans and the small carrots of a stump rooted type called Danvers Half-long.

On the shady side of what ever shape garden is constructed can be sown various kinds of lettuce which do well in less than full sun. Small Butterheads, leafy Simpson types, Endive with curly leaves, Cos with upright growth, and parsley are all green salad vegetables that cost a lot but provide daily minerals and vitamins when eaten fresh.

The balcony garden may take the shape of a three-tiered box garden, each tier smaller than the one below, so that soil space around each bottomless box is utilized for growing the vegetables.

If all this planning seems too much, it may be easier and more convenient to rent an allotment garden with ample space for all these suggestions and many many more.

But first if you have a balcony which seems suitable, and it has supports that come direct from the ground up to the balcony, work out the possibilities of this idea.

Teacher fed head praises minister

VANCOUVER (CP) — Education Minister Brian Smith has contributed to renewed public respect for the teaching profession, B.C. Teachers' Federation president Al Blakey said Sunday.

"We meet in somewhat different circumstances at this convention than the last one," Blakey told the opening session of the federation's annual meeting.

"One of the most significant reasons is that last year we had a Dr. (Pat) McGeer speak to us, and this year we don't," he said to thunderous applause.

"For three and a half years we had an education minister who went around the province speaking against teachers at the top of his lungs.

"Now we have a minister who has said he will look at the questions before giving some answers."

Blakey predicted a new mood of co-operation between the public and schools in the 1980s.

"The backlash of the back-to-the-basics element is beginning to wane," he said.

"The mood of this province is changing — the mood towards education is no longer as negative as it has been."

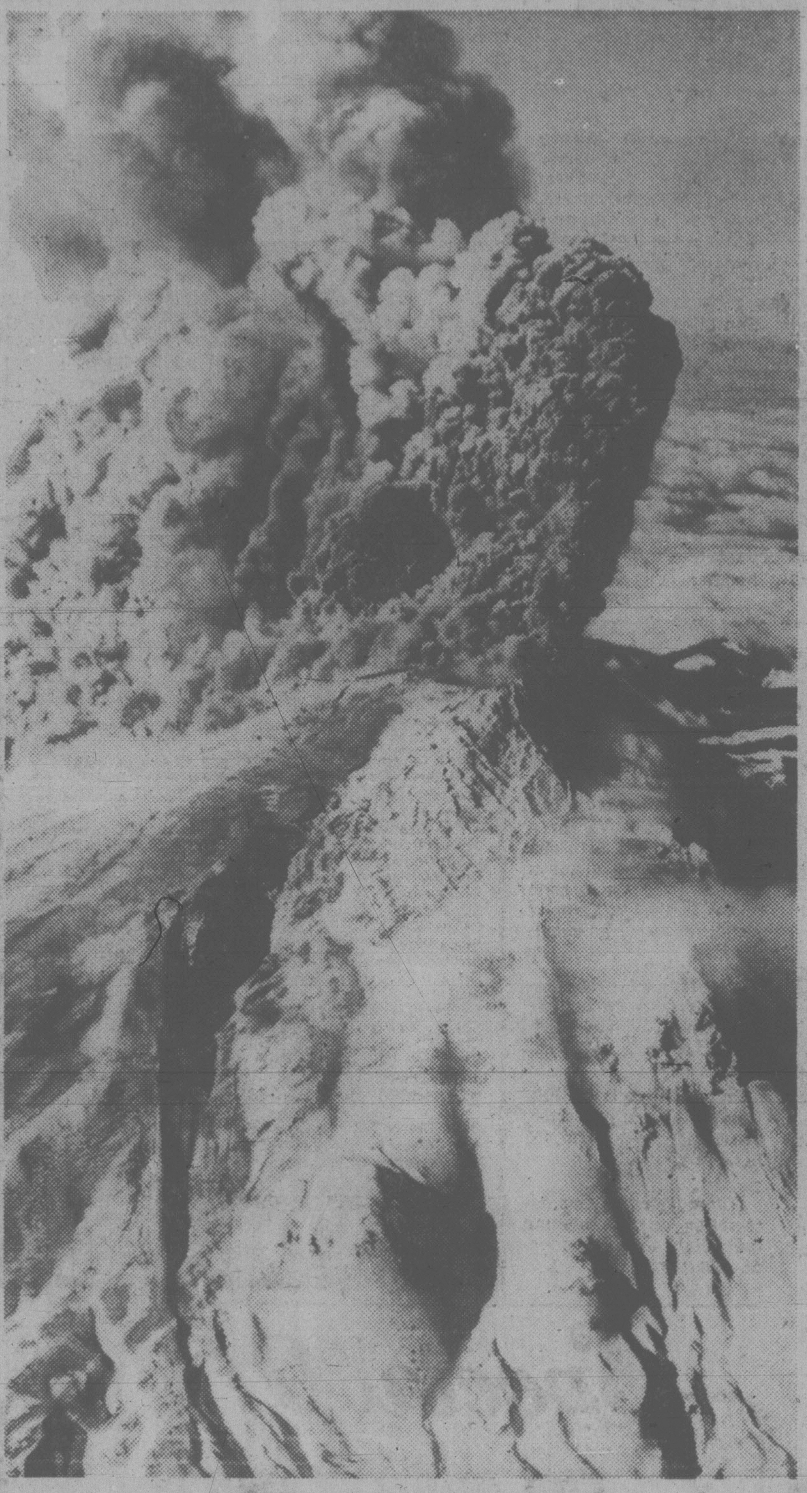
Volcano double trouble



Crater blasts on the wane

Times News Services

COUGAR, Wash. — A series of booming explosions shot steam and ash more than 5,000 metres into the air Sunday from two craters on the fissure-scarred summit of volcanic Mount St. Helens, prompting scientists to predict the craters will expand into one gigantic hole.

The two craters, acting like a double-barreled shotgun, were separated by only 9 metres of the ash-blackened mountain top.

Today however, the eruptions diminished to occasional puffs of smoke as fine ash spread in a thick cloud that drifted 88 kilometres southeast along the Columbia River.

Meanwhile, an earthquake described as moderately strong occurred about 240 kilometres off the Oregon coast early Sunday, but scientists said it was not related to the activity at Mount St. Helens.

The Pacific quake, which registered 5 on the Richter Scale, disturbed the ocean slightly, the U.S. Geological Survey said, but was not strong enough to produce a tidal wave.

Harry hangs in with whisky

TOUTLE LAKE, Wash. (AP) — You can tell Harry Truman, 83, means business when he swears he'll leave Mount St. Helens "feet first," though his lofty mountain home has become a volcano.

"I've got a four-week supply of food, and I just renewed my whisky supply," he told a news conference Sunday on a quick trip down the mountain.

"I won't leave. I don't like these earthquakes, but I trust the mountain. I'm part of the mountain."

He said the incessant quakes are getting on his nerves, but he believed the worst was over and geologists who said the worst was to come are "lying like horses trot."

Truman has managed a lodge and rented boats on Spirit Lake for 51 years. Indeed, he says: "I am Spirit Lake."

Police took Truman to the news conference after the feisty gent was sought by numerous people at a mountain roadblock.

"I live right next to that mountain, and I haven't heard a single explosion. This whole eruption business is being overdone."

Truman, who said his ruddy complexion is from "a Schenley flush" rather than the effects of fresh mountain air, invited "everyone" his lodge next summer.

"Bring your chequebooks and some rotgut," he said. "Don't forget the rotgut."

Little known of Iran militants

United Press International

They have been holding the 50 Americans hostage in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran for 146 days. They call themselves students. Others call them militants.

But just who the armed men in battledress and the black-veiled women are is a question at the heart of the Iranian crisis that has no simple answer.

There are a few facts, some generally accepted beliefs and a multitude of theories.

Indeed, if Washington knew, it could pursue a design for the prisoners' release based on psychological certainties and political realities.

But the most strenuous intelligence efforts by the richest nation on earth have brought the U.S. government no nearer to an answer than it was when the militants seized the embassy on Nov. 4.

The captors are said to range from Islamic fundamentalists through Marxist leftists to Palestinian-trained Fedayeen guerrillas.

What seems certain is that some 400 men and women, in about equal numbers, are involved and they are mostly in their teens and early 20s. Of these, probably only 50 are hard-core decision-makers.

The occupying force is a fluid one and there is constant coming and going around the embassy compound.

Some of the captors do seem to be students as they claim — they have remarked to Western reporters that they were missing their exams.

Although adept at handling the media, there is great secretiveness about personal identity. When a reporter asks for a name, they will say "Mister Y" or "Mister Q." One, who has been a regular spokesman, offers a first name, like "Shahpour."

On the telephone, they identify the embassy as "The Spy Nest" and themselves as "the followers of the Imam's line." The telephone spokesmen are invariably men and always polite. Some speak better English than others and the poorer speakers take pains to ensure that they are understood.

The militants are not above "packing" news conferences. Before the crackdown on the American press, reporters were given numbered slips to gain entrance to a news conference in the compound.

When a journalist's number came up, he was allowed one question. Finally the reporters realized they were being given all the even numbers while the odd ones went to the militants themselves who then asked loaded questions.

Challenged about this, a spokesman said the questioners were members of the "student press."

The political make-up of the hard core is impossible to determine and it is likely there are internal squabbles and divisions.

Gen. George Keegan, a former chief of U.S. Air Force intelligence, has said the militants are "disciplined Communist revolutionaries" and the embassy seizure was so meticulously planned that it had to be "a Kremlin caper from the beginning."

Many neutral diplomats are not so convinced. They believe the recurring theme of Soviet involvement is an attempt by Americans to explain what to them is inexplicable by theorizing that if the militants are so vehemently anti-American, Russia must be at the bottom of it.

These diplomats point out that the militants have frequently made it clear they are as opposed to the East as to the West, and that "atheistic" Communism has no attraction for religious followers of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

That there are both Moslem fundamentalists and more ideologically committed leftists among the group seems indisputable, and there is a growing belief that if the gunmen originally included Palestinian-trained Fedayeen, most have since dropped out.

Some U.S. sources believe a non-practising dentist, Habibollah Peyman, 43, has begun to emerge as the guru of the militants.

Though his language is sprinkled with Marxist cliches — he says his goal is "to achieve a purely revolutionary society with equality and classlessness" — the small, extremist guerrilla group that he leads, the Militant Moslems Movement, is non-Marxist and anti-Communist, the sources say.

In a rare interview, he declared, "If the government or the Revolutionary Council want coexistence with the U.S. imperialists, that would not be possible from the students' point of view."

Hope for break in Iran raised

TEHRAN (CP) — The Iranian government may announce new steps in the American hostage crisis as early as tonight, perhaps including transfer of the 50 captives to government custody, a foreign ministry spokesman said.

But revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini made a new broadcast attack on the United States, accusing it of threatening force.

Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr met Monday with representatives of the student militants, but there were no official announcements after his talks with the three militants, the official news agency Pars said. The meeting took place in a government building where the president had met earlier with members of the ruling Revolutionary Council, which he heads.

U.S. President Carter postponed a scheduled Washington speech to a labor group and set a conference with national security advisers, shortly after reports from Iran said transfer of the hostages was being considered.

It also was learned in Washington that a message Carter sent to Iranian officials warned that the United States would order further retaliation against Iran if there is no break in the hostage situation.

In Cairo, an Egyptian doctor said the deposed Iranian shah's cancer has spread to his liver. Doctors removed the ex-monarch's dangerously enlarged spleen last Friday in an operation in a Cairo hospital. It was the deposed monarch's admission to the United States for treatment of his cancer, despite the opposition of the new Iranian regime, that sparked the Nov. 4 takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran by Iranian student militants and the seizure of American hostages.

In a Tehran radio broadcast today, Khomeini attacked the United States for what he called threats of military force to free the American hostages.

"It was all words," he said of the U.S. stance. "Even now it is all just words. Never be afraid of such words because they are not followed by action."

The Iranian foreign ministry spokesman told The Canadian Press the subject of a hostage transfer was taken up by the ruling Revolutionary Council and that President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr would discuss the matter tonight with Khomeini, who would have the final word.

After a Sunday council meeting, Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said the council members had discussed a proposal made by Irish diplomat Sean

On to Moscow for Canadians?

MONTREAL (CP) — The board of directors of the Canadian Olympic Association passed a four-part resolution Sunday affirming its intention to accept an invitation to participate in the Summer Games at Moscow, president Dick Pound said.

The resolution said the COA "rejects in principle the proposition that the burden of Canada's response to the present international situation be borne primarily by Canadian Olympic athletes and that, in the absence of a much broader Canadian government response to the international situation, the COA confirms its resolve to accept the invitation to participate in the 1980 Olympic Games, within the time limit provided in the Olympic Charter."

Pound said the directors were unanimous in the decision to send a team to Moscow. United States President Jimmy Carter has proposed a boycott to protest the Soviet Union's invasion of Afghanistan, but the Liberal government of Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau has not announced what stand Canada will take.

"We have received an invitation," Pound said of an invitation from the Moscow organizing committee, "but, out of courtesy to the government, we won't respond until meeting them."

The COA must tell the Moscow organizing committee whether it will take part and how many will be in the Canadian delegation eight weeks before the Games open July 19. That makes the deadline May 24.

40 die at Romero rites as shots trigger panic

SAN SALVADOR (Reuter) — At least 40 people were killed, many of them trampled to death, when gunfire and bombs sent thousands of mourners fleeing for their lives at the funeral Sunday of murdered Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero.

The thousands of sandals and shoes strewn around the Barrios Plaza in front of San Salvador's Cathedral told the story of the tragedy They had been abandoned by mourners who fled in panic.

At the sound of guns, the crowd turned into a shrieking mob. Official Red Cross and hospital spokesmen said at least 40 people died and 450 were injured — most of them trampled under the tidal wave of terrified human beings.

The body of Romero, who was shot to death while saying mass last Monday, was about to be laid to rest in a crypt in San Salvador's Roman Catholic Cathedral when the violence erupted.

An estimated 300,000 people fought their way to safety along with church leaders representing the Vatican, the United States, Europe and Latin America.

Sporadic gunfire rang out through the night in the nearly deserted capital, where troops in jeeps

Then he went back to rags by accepting the role of Ratso Rizzo, a Times Square scavenger, in Midnight Cowboy.

Hoffman explained he was concerned about becoming typecast as an amiable bumbler and played Ratso to demonstrate his versatility.

He was nominated for Academy Awards for both performances.

His career has been a stunning series of successes since then.

A perennial nominee, he is up for best actor again this year for his powerful role in Kramer vs. Kramer, which is also highly-regarded in the best-movie category.

Weighing just 135 pounds, and only slightly over five-feet, six inches tall, Hoffman got his first taste of acting as a schoolboy in the role of Tiny Tim.

As an adult actor he has gone from success to success and has a good chance for the Oscar this year in a wide-open race.

Others nominated for best actor are Jack Lemmon, The China Syndrome; Al Pacino, And Justice for All; Roy Scheider, All That Jazz; and Peter Sellers, Being There.

The Academy Awards will be announced April 14.

Readers who correctly predict the winners for best actor, actress and movie will have a chance to win a trip for two to Hollywood via CP Air, in a contest sponsored by the Victoria Times and VI*90.

There are also five runner-up awards.

Entries have been pouring in at the rate of at least 100 per day.

Tax cheaters better beware!

TORONTO (CP) — Canadians who cheat on their income tax forms will face a much greater chance of going to jail in the future, a senior federal tax official warned Saturday.

James Gourlay told a conference on taxation that a jail term for tax evasion is extremely rare at present. But he said federal prosecutors soon will be pushing courts much harder for prison sentences.

Gourlay said the number of Canadians trying to evade taxes is increasing and fines — even hefty ones — do not seem to carry the social stigma of jail sentences.

Another reason imprisonment will become more common, he said, is that courts are realizing they are using a double standard by fining tax evaders and sending welfare and unemployment insurance cheaters to jail.

Gourlay said that unreported legal and illegal income was costing Canadians more than $3 billion a year in unpaid taxes.

Carter wrestles budget

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter today proposed to cut federal programs by $2.6 billion this fiscal year and $15 billion in 1981 — below budget estimates he made in January — in order to fight mounting inflation.

He urged Congress to approve the cuts, threatened to use his veto if legislators overspend, and said that if that fails he will ask Congress for "a temporary grant of extraordinary budget restraint powers."

"We have a real fight ahead," the president said as he signed the revised budget — the first balanced budget in more than a decade.

Along with the new budget came a stark, new estimate of inflation ahead from the president's Council of Economic Advisers.

They now project consumer prices will rise 13.9 per cent during 1980, which would make this the worst inflation year since an 18.2 per cent rise in 1946 after Second World War economic controls were lifted.

The provincial government laid on a reception for the prince's first-ever visit to Vancouver at 7 p.m. in the waterfront Bayshore Inn.

Tuesday morning will see him down at Vancouver's fishermen's wharf, while the afternoon will be spent at the University of B.C.

He'll be in Victoria just under 36 hours, and residents who want to catch a glimpse of the bachelor heir to the British throne should probably station themselves outside Government House.

He'll fly over from Vancouver late Tuesday night, arriving at Victoria airport at 10 p.m.

The prince will stay at Lt.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving's official residence and Wednesday morning at 8:15 he will leave by car for Pearson College.

The prince will spend the day out at Pedder Bay in meetings of the International Council of World Colleges, of which he is president.

Government House expects him back about 5:10 p.m. for a reception starting at 6:30 p.m.

Then it's off to the Royal Theatre at 8:20 p.m. for Pearson College's annual benefit show, featuring performances by its students from all over the world.

Dewey's World

"The city has decided it might be 'convenient' to accept pennies again — now that the price of copper has made them worth two cents each . . ."

Well-known Victoria illustrator and cartoonist Nelson Dewey makes his first appearance in today's Victoria Times with a new series of humorous comments on life in the world at large and Victoria in particular.

Floating highway to Vancouver?

By AL FORREST

Former provincial cabinet minister Sam Bawlf today unveiled a $2 billion floating bridge proposal to link Vancouver Island and the mainland and head off a crisis in the ferry system.

The alternative, Bawlf said, is to endure ferry lineups of four to six hours when the ferry system reaches saturation point as early as 1983.

He said the bridge, if started this year, could be completed by 1986.

It would allow two-way car traffic.

It would also operate on a toll system so there would be no mass migration of traffic to Victoria.

"We would not be opening the floodgates, we would simply be dealing with present behavior but through a fixed link. Tolls would be comparable to ferry rates."

He estimated freight and passenger tolls would bring in $750,000 a day and the bridge would pay for itself in 15 years.

An additional $1 billion could be saved by using the fixed link as a corridor for additional power lines and the proposed natural gas pipeline.

Bawlf was commenting on the publication of a ferry traffic study commissioned in 1978 when he was in charge of the B.C. Ferry Corporation.

Figures in the report, prepared by Acres Consulting Services Ltd., indicate the alternative is to spend $1 billion in the next ten years to expand terminals and build additional ferries.

At the end of the decade further spending would be needed because of the continual growth, Bawlf said.

Bawlf said a fixed link with the mainland would provide a permanent solution to the crisis. A tunnel is one option but a floating bridge might be better.

He suggested the bridge could start at Tsawwassen and end in the Duncan-Ladysmith area.

Because of the additional traffic, a new fast highway route from Duncan to Victoria would be needed, bypassing the Malahat.

This new highway route is already in the discussion stage, Bawlf said.

The bridge would involve submerged floating pontoons with piers constructed upwards. The bridge would be several feet above the water and would not be subjected to wave action.

The bridge would be submerged to form a floating tunnel at one point to allow ships to pass through.

"The technology has already been perfected for a project of this scale."

The problem facing the ferry fleet, Bawlf said, is that in 1979 there was an average of 20,000 people carried daily on ferries between Vancouver Island and the Lower Mainland.

On a peak day in summer, the load reached 60,000.

Ten years from now, at present growth rates, the daily average will be almost 50,000 and the load on a peak summer day will hit 150,000.

"That's 150,000 people in a single day. That's why I said the furore over the Princess Marguerite was a tempest in a teapot in terms of its effect on Vancouver Island.

"A passenger load of 150,000 in a day represents about 100 trips of the Marguerite."

"We need an expression of opinion from all sections of the province. This is a provincial concern," Balwf said, adding he is convinced the government will not spend $2 billion on a project of this magnitude without a clear expression of widespread public support.

If the idea is approved in principle, the next step would be a technical feasibility study this year, taking nine months and costing about $1 million.

Stage three would be construction.

The fixed link might carry cars or simply rail rapid transit.

"It is the principle that has to be resolved first,

Armed rubbery

That was the result for virtually everyone who took part in Sunday's arm wrestling contest sponsored by VI90 and the Victoria YM-YWCA. The event at the Y attracted 250 to 300 competitors and spectators. The man who had the situation firmly in his grasp after the strain and pain ended was Terrance Gramigna (left), who emerged the over-all winner. The chap keeping a close eye on the armed conflict is John Sipos, who is Mr. Victoria. Ben Powell (below) wasn't as fortunate as Gramigna. He started off with grim determination (left) but simply wasn't able to come to grips with the task at hand despite a valiant last effort (centre). His expression (right) tells it all — the agony of defeat. Ah well, maybe things will go better for Ben next time. As they say, to be forewarned is to be forearmed. (John McKay photos).

ARM WRESTLING CONTEST

In case you're wondering

What's happening these days at the Victoria International Airport? When is the long-awaited expansion going to take place?

Not much and it's perhaps what's not happening that is uppermost with all travellers who use the airport.

One of the few large airports where passengers must pick up their luggage outside, expansion of the terminal facilities has been on the list for a long time along with installation of radar equipment.

Few of the passengers know that the top floor of the airport houses a meteorological office with eight technicians and an officer-in-charge.

Along with a ground and maintenance crew of 15, there are eight people employed in telecommunications and at least 15 traffic controllers.

There are 28 flights a day in and out of the airport while an average of 30 to 40 small planes use it per day.

The largest of the three runways is 7,000 feet.

The 58½ acres on which the airport is located was bought from Stanley and Philip Brethour in the 1940s for a military training base in the Second World War.

It became the Victoria International Airport in 1967.

No strike delays on ferries

Traffic was heavy on the B.C. Ferries Corp. fleet Sunday, but there were no delays caused by additional truck traffic diverted by a strike against CP ferries, a corporation spokesman said.

Meanwhile, federally-mediated discussions resumed today in efforts to end the dispute over a new contract, now into its second week.

Mediators Don Crabbe and Mike Collins have conferred with officials of CP and the Seafarers International Union since being appointed last Wednesday to try to bring the two sides to a settlement.

Sixty crewmen walked out March 23, halting service by three CP ferries and a fourth under contract to CP from Seaspan International Ltd.

B.C. Ferries is adding an additional late-night sailing for trucks as required, but a spokesman said none had been needed since Friday.

Pool unlocked, tot drowns

A 3½-year-old boy drowned in an apartment swimming pool and a 39-year-old man was killed when his car plunged into Tod Creek in Saanich on the weekend.

Police said the body of Timothy Lawrence Christianson was found by his mother, Mrs. Laur Christianson, in the pool at the Orangewood Manor apartments, 4026 Quadra, about 11:30 a.m. Sunday.

Efforts were made to revive the boy but he was pronounced dead at Victoria General Hospital more than two hours later.

Police said the door through which the boy gained access to the pool can't be locked because of fire regulations.

Building superintendent Ron Vandervelde said today that although there had been a request for a lock on the sliding patio door leading outside from the pool, the fire marshal ruled against it as the door serves as a fire exit.

The interior door which gives access to the pool from within the building must be opened with a key.

Vandervelde said the youngster had to climb a 2½-foot-high garden wall and go through a small garden to reach the doors.

He said the door had been left open despite repeated requests to tenants to keep it latched.

A spokesman said a car driven by Isherwood, of 6973 Wallace Dr., Central Saanich, left Wallace Drive at a point about 400 metres north of Durrance Lake Road, rolled down a 35-foot embankment and landed upside down in the two-foot-deep waters of Tod Creek.

The vehicle was not found until about noon Saturday.

Saanich police said Isherwood was reported missing by his wife Friday evening.

The car was spotted by farmer Edward Bartlett.

Isherwood is survived by his wife and three children, Geraldine, Thomas and Ross.

He managed the hotel with his brother, Joseph, and was a Shriner and member of the Elks.

City parks budget only $25,000 off the mark

City council's budget committee today approved a $958,770 budget for Victoria's parks department after making only one cut of $25,000 from the allotment for capital improvements to city parks.

Aldermen had few complaints about parks administrator Al Smith's spending plans because he held close to council's general target figure of a 7½ per cent increase.

After the cut, his budget was slightly more that eight per cent above the 1979 parks spending.

Members of the committee even wanted to give him more money for one item the hanging flower baskets put up on the old cluster lamp standards every spring, which have become an international symbol of the city.

Ald. Bill McElroy said he wnted to see more of them, but Smith said the 650 which the parks department now cares for are the most the present operation can handle.

Any major expansion (Fort Street merchants have asked for flower baskets this year) would overtax the city's facilities, Smith said.

It's probably a hoax but it's costing taxpayers plenty.

At 8:25 p.m. Sunday the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre at Esquimalt received a May Day message that the 20-foot pleasure craft Seawolf with four people aboard was sinking in the Point Roberts area . Sidney.

A Buffalo aircraft and helicopter from CFB Comox as well as a United States Coast Guard helicopter were despatched. Two boats, manned by Provincial Emergency Program volunteers, also searched the area.

Pass system may replace free buses

The city-subsidized downtown Freewheeler bus zone ended today but a pass system likely will replace the scheme later this year if the Capital Regional District gives approval.

Mayor Bill Tindall said the city did not extend its half-share of the funding for the $42,000 six-month demonstration program, sponsored jointly by Victoria and the Urban Transit Authority.

The last free ride in the 22-square-block area of downtown was at 3 p.m. today.

The program was designed to encourage people to use transit in the congested downtown core, but the mayor said operational problems led to difficulties.

"While rider response was generally favorable, the service created operating problems and passenger confusion that have negated the value of the service," the mayor said in a statement.

"The main area of confusion centred around the fact that while persons could ride around the downtown area for free, they had to pay if they continued on the bus beyond the fare-free zone."

The mayor said the UTA is preparing a plan that would involve the sale of several types of passes, including a daily pass for probably twice the regular 50-cent fare, a weekly pass for commuters, and possibly also an annual pass.

The fourth type would be a corporate pass to be sold in bulk to employers and businesses.

New York

The stock market gave some of its early gains in slower trading this afternoon as market attention returned to longer term uncertainties about the economy.

Analysts described much of the market's early trading strength as a short-lived carryover of strength from Friday's session when the Dow blue chip index was powered to a 17.67 point gain.

The commerce department report of a small decline in the index of leading economic indicators had been expected. But the report, showing the fifth consecutive monthly decline in the index, underscored longer term worries that a recession is imminent and may be more severe than previously forecast, said Monte Gordon of Dreyfus Corp.

President Carter also sent his revised 1981 fiscal budget to Congress on Monday, calling for a bigger budget cuts and forecasting worse inflation but a milder recession than the January forecast had indicated.

London

The Financial Times index gained four points to 425.5.

Industrials and oils rose while golds eased.

B.C. Packers buys Canadian Fishing plant

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — British Columbia Packers Ltd. has announced it is purchasing processing and service facilities from Canadian Fish Co. Ltd.

B.C. Packers did not disclose the price of the Oceanside cannery and other properties near Prince Rupert, and packing facilities in southern B.C.

The company said the purchase will enable it to "rationalize and upgrade its operations to better meet the challenges facing the industry and company in future years."

B.C. Packers president J. B. Buchanan said the fishing industry in B.C. has suffered severe setbacks recently, including the deterioration of the herring roe industry. As well, the forecast for this year's salmon fishery isn't too bright, he said.

However, he said the company is looking at the purchase as a long-term process.

B.C. Packers now operates two processing plants near Prince Rupert and the purchase of the Oceanside plant will allow the company to consolidate its interests, he said.

Loans available at 5 per cent

TORONTO (CP) — Many thousands of Canadians still can borrow money at annual interest rates of five or six per cent thrugh life insurance policies, spokesmen for the insurance industry say.

What's more, borrowers don't even have to repay the loans.

Frank Dimock, senior vice-president of the Canadian Life Insurance Association (CLIA), said in an interview anyone who took out a whole-life insurance policy before Sept. 1, 1968, probably qualifies for loans against the policy charging interest rates no higher than six per cent, although consumer loan rates now stand at 16.5 to 17 per cent.

A whole-life policy is a contract to provide permanent financial protection, as opposed to term policies which apply for a stated period.

Dimock said a policyholder can borrow against his policy up to an amount slightly less than the cash value.

The money does not have to be paid back but Dimock cautioned that this dilutes the value of the policy. Any amount owing is deducted from the face value when the insurance is paid.

Dimock, whose group represents 16 companies doing about three-quarters of the value of life insurance business in Canada, said the low lending rate on pre-1968 policies dates back to 1935, in the depths of the Depression.

In that year, Canada's insurance industry made a commitment to the federal government not to charge more than six per cent on policy loans. some companies set their ceiling at five per cent.

The commitment was withdrawn on new policies as of Sept. 1, 1968, but remains in force on policies written before that date.

Dimock said that since then some companies have continued to set limits on rates they charge on policy loans while others fix the rates at the time the loan is taken out.
